

CITY RELOCATION GUIDE · AUSTRALIA

Bundaberg

Where you would work, where you would live, and what an ordinary week looks like in Bundaberg.

Ethicare Resourcing

9 chapters · September 2026

ethicareresourcing.com

What's inside

01 Welcome to Bundaberg

02 Why Bundaberg

03 Bundaberg at a glance

04 Healthcare in Bundaberg

05 Where clinicians live

06 Getting around

07 Cost of living

08 Food, the market & the everyday

09 Mon Repos, the reef & the weekend

This guide is free, and so is everything in it. Every chapter here is also on the website, where it is kept up to date — so if you are reading this some months after downloading it, check the site for anything that looks time-sensitive. Fees, tax rates and immigration settings change without much notice.

We don't print these. A PDF costs nothing to send and nothing to ship, which felt like the right answer for a company that spends its days moving people around the world.

Welcome to Bundaberg

Bundaberg Guide · Chapter 1 of 9

Bundaberg is the city that puts the southern Great Barrier Reef within reach: a river city in southern Queensland's Wide Bay–Burnett region, home turf of Bundaberg Rum and Australia's largest mainland turtle rookery. Here it is in nine numbers, then six things nobody tells you until you have moved.

A cane town that became a health and reef hub

Around 55,000 people live in Bundaberg itself, with the wider council area approaching 100,000 across the surrounding cane country and coastal towns. The city sits on the Burnett River about 15 kilometres inland, roughly four hours' drive north of Brisbane. Sugar built it — the mills and canefields still ring the city — and sugar is also why Bundaberg Rum and Bundaberg Brewed Drinks both started here and still shape its identity.

For clinicians the proposition is specific: the region's public hospital anchors the Wide Bay Hospital and Health Service, covering Bundaberg, the Fraser Coast, North Burnett and the Discovery Coast — a catchment of more than 225,000 people and growing. That hospital is currently mid-way through one of regional Queensland's largest health infrastructure projects, a multi-hundred-million-dollar rebuild adding beds, theatres and diagnostic capacity for a region the state expects to keep growing.

The honest costs: a smaller specialist bench than Brisbane, a four-hour drive or a short flight for a proper tertiary opinion, and a wet season from November to March that catches some new arrivals out. This guide prices all three plainly.

Who wrote this

We are a healthcare recruitment company, so we have an interest — but this guide is not a pitch. Nothing in it asks you to register, and there is no visa advice.

Bundaberg suits people who want real regional responsibility, warm weather and a coastline, and who would rather not pay Brisbane or southern-capital prices for any of it. Where we think it is the wrong fit, we say so.

The city, in nine numbers

~55,000

People in Bundaberg itself, closer to 100,000 across the wider region.

4 hrs

To Brisbane by road via the Bruce Highway.

~70 min

Flight time to Brisbane from the regional airport.

225,000+

People in the wider Wide Bay catchment the region's health service covers.

Largest

Mainland loggerhead turtle rookery in Australia, twenty minutes away at Mon Repos.

15 min

To Bargara and the Coral Coast beaches.

1888

The year rum distilling began here, from the sugar industry's surplus molasses.

Southernmost

Great Barrier Reef islands — Lady Elliot and Lady Musgrave — sit offshore.

Regional

Classification for skilled migration purposes.

Six things you only learn once you are here

It is a river city first

Central Bundaberg sits on the Burnett River, about fifteen minutes inland. The beaches are a short, deliberate drive, not a walk.

Rum and ginger beer are civic icons

The Bundaberg Rum distillery and Bundaberg Brewed Drinks both started here and still shape the skyline and the local identity.

Cane defines the calendar

Sugar cane surrounds the city, and the crushing season from roughly June to December brings cane trains and mill smoke that longtime locals barely notice.

The reef starts here, quietly

Lady Elliot and Lady Musgrave are the southernmost Great Barrier Reef islands, reachable by small plane or day boat, with a fraction of the crowds further north.

A new hospital is rising

The region's public hospital is mid-way through one of regional Queensland's largest health rebuilds — a sign of how fast the wider region is expected to grow.

Summer is genuinely wet

The build-up from November can be humid and stormy. Long-term residents plan around it rather than fight it.

A note on Country

Bundaberg sits on the country of the Taribelang Bunda, Gooreng Gooreng, Gurang and Bailai peoples.

Acknowledgement of Country opens meetings and events across the region, as it does across Queensland.

How to read this guide

Nine chapters, all about Bundaberg specifically. Anything true of Australia generally – Medicare, visas, Ahpra registration, tax, superannuation, schools – lives once in Moving to Australia, so you read it once and not nine times.

If you read nothing else, read Why Bundaberg for the case honestly weighed, and Healthcare in Bundaberg, because the region's growth is the part most people underestimate.

Why Bundaberg

Bundaberg Guide · Chapter 2 of 9

Most people who move here are trading a bigger city for warmer weather, a shorter commute and a beach that is never far away. That trade is real, and so is what you give up. Both sides, plainly.

What Bundaberg is actually good at

Real responsibility, quickly

A busy, growing regional health service means broader day-to-day scope and faster entry to complex work than a big-city rotation.

A commute measured in minutes

Most of the city sits ten to fifteen minutes from work, whichever suburb you choose.

Housing that leaves room

A fraction of Brisbane or the southern capitals' prices, so a family home near the water is realistic on a single clinical income.

Regional migration incentives

Bundaberg's classification opens skilled-migration pathways the capitals do not offer.

Warm, reliably

A subtropical climate most people would pay a premium for elsewhere in Australia.

The reef and the rookery, minutes away

Turtles at Mon Repos, reef islands offshore, without Cairns' crowds or prices.

A quiet boardwalk to the beach along Bundaberg's coast.

What to weigh up

None of the following should stop you. All of them are worth knowing before you sign, because they are what people tell us they wish they had asked about.

Clinical

The bench is real but finite

Fewer colleagues in your specialty than a metropolitan department. Ask how many people sit alongside you specifically, not how many work in the region.

Clinical

The most complex work is referred south

Brisbane and Sunshine Coast tertiary centres take the rarest cases, a normal part of how regional Queensland operates.

Practical

Brisbane is a real trip, not a hop

Four hours by road or around seventy minutes by air. Fine for an occasional weekend, a genuine commitment for a same-day trip.

Practical

The wet season is genuinely wet

November to March brings heat, humidity and heavier rain. If you are arriving from a temperate climate, budget for a real adjustment.

Personal

It is a regional city, not a big one

The amenities of a growing regional centre, not of Brisbane or the Gold Coast. Some people find that a relief; others miss the range.

When another city is the better answer

If you need a large subspecialty team around you, Brisbane — or for a bigger coastal city with more amenities, the Gold Coast — is the honest recommendation, and both are close enough that Bundaberg can be a later move rather than a rejected one. If the draw is the warm-climate, reef-adjacent lifestyle specifically, that is exactly what Bundaberg offers without the far-north crowds or prices.

“

Bundaberg trades a bigger city for a shorter drive to the reef and a longer afternoon at the beach.

What clinicians tell us, in one sentence

A typical week

A ten-minute drive to work. An evening at Bargara while there is still light left. Saturday morning at the markets. Turtle season a genuine family ritual from November to March. A reef-island day trip when the weather allows it. Brisbane when you want a proper trip away.

The short version

Bundaberg gives you real regional responsibility in a growing health service, a commute in minutes, and the reef and the coast on your doorstep, for a fraction of what housing costs in Brisbane. What it asks in return is a smaller specialist bench and a four-hour drive to the nearest big city. If warm weather and a shorter commute matter to you, few places in Australia offer them this affordably.

Bundaberg at a glance

Bundaberg Guide · Chapter 3 of 9

Bundaberg is easier to understand once you see it as a river city surrounded by cane, with the coast a deliberate short drive away rather than on the doorstep. Almost everything about the city follows from that.

The shape of the place

The city sits on the Burnett River about fifteen kilometres inland, with canefields ringing it on three sides and the coast — Bargara, Innes Park, Elliott Heads — a short drive east. The city centre and the older suburbs sit close to the river; newer growth has spread toward the coast and along the highway corridors.

~55,000

Bundaberg city

~100,000

Wider Bundaberg region

4 hrs

To Brisbane by road

Where Bundaberg sits, with the straight-line distance to Hervey Bay and Gladstone

The seasons, honestly

Bundaberg's climate is subtropical and warm for most of the year, which is the whole appeal for a lot of people who move here. The real distinction is wet season versus dry, not hot versus cold.

Summer — Dec to Mar

Hot, humid and wet — the build-up and the wet season proper, with the heaviest rain and the occasional cyclone-adjacent system.

Autumn — Apr to May

Warm and drier, arguably the best stretch of the year for being outdoors.

Winter — Jun to Aug

Mild, dry and sunny — the reason retirees and grey nomads move here or pass through every year.

Spring — Sep to Nov

Warming up, the driest stretch of the year, before the build-up returns.

How the city got here

Long before

Taribelang Bunda, Gooreng Gooreng, Gurang and Bailai Country

The Burnett River and the surrounding coast have been lived on and managed by these peoples for tens of thousands of years.

1870

A township on the Burnett River

European settlement followed the river, and the town was established for the agricultural land around it.

1880s onward

The sugar industry

Cane mills and the rail lines built to serve them shaped the city's economy and are still working today.

1888

Rum from surplus molasses

Distilling began to use up what the sugar mills could not sell, and grew into one of Australia's most recognised drinks brands.

Today

A regional service and agricultural centre

Bundaberg now anchors the Wide Bay region's health, retail and administrative services, with the state's health system mid-way through a major hospital rebuild to keep pace with growth.

What is here that you would not expect

Australia's largest mainland turtle rookery

One of the country's most recognised drinks brands, distilled on site

The southernmost coral reef islands of the Great Barrier Reef

A macadamia and small-crop growing region as significant as its cane

A regional airport with direct Brisbane flights

A stop on the Brisbane–Cairns rail line

One of Queensland's sunniest climates

A major hospital rebuild, among the largest in regional Queensland

Orientation, in one line

A river city surrounded by cane, with the coast a deliberate short drive away and the reef quietly offshore.

Decide how close to the water you want to live, and the rest of the map follows.

Healthcare in Bundaberg

Bundaberg Guide · Chapter 4 of 9

Bundaberg's health service is growing faster than its population, for one structural reason: the wider Wide Bay region is one of the fastest-growing corners of regional Queensland. Understanding that trajectory is the difference between reading this as a small-city posting and reading it accurately.

The system

A regional referral centre

The region's public hospital anchors the Wide Bay Hospital and Health Service, covering Bundaberg, the Fraser Coast, North Burnett and the Discovery Coast.

A large, growing catchment

The wider service area covers more than 225,000 people, a number the state expects to keep growing for decades.

A hospital being rebuilt for growth

The public hospital is mid-way through one of regional Queensland's largest health infrastructure projects, adding beds, theatres and diagnostic capacity.

A genuine private sector

Private hospital and specialist imaging services operate alongside the public system.

Brisbane is the tertiary backstop

The most complex cases are referred south to Brisbane or Sunshine Coast tertiary centres, a normal part of how regional Queensland operates.

A note on names

We don't name hospitals, trusts or private providers as places of work anywhere on this site — a named employer implies a relationship, and the post and the package get confirmed with you directly. Everything above is described structurally for that reason. If you want to know exactly where a role sits, ask us and we will tell you plainly.

What a growing region does to your work

A regional health service under active investment pulls in two directions at once, and both are true of the same job.

What the region gives you

Broader day-to-day scope than a metropolitan subspecialty post, plus the rare chance to help shape a service as its capacity expands, rather than joining one already at capacity.

What it asks of you

Comfort with a smaller specialist bench than Brisbane, and with a service still building out some of the capacity a bigger centre already has.

Imaging and radiation, specifically

This is where our Queensland work is concentrated, so it is the part we can speak to in most detail. A growing regional service under active capital investment is a specific kind of opportunity for imaging and radiation professionals: genuine breadth across modalities day to day, real prospects as new capacity comes online, and a case mix drawn from a large, largely rural and coastal catchment that a metropolitan department would not see in the same proportions.

Profession guide

Radiographers in Australia

Ahpra registration, the pathway in order, and what the role is really like.

Profession guide

Nuclear medicine in Australia

The registration route for technologists, and what to expect from the work.

Profession guide

Sonographers in Australia

ASAR accreditation, the pathway, and indicative pay.

Profession guide

Radiation therapists in Australia

Recognition of your training, scope of practice, indicative pay.

How pay works here

Registration is national but pay is not. In the public system, salaries are set by the relevant Queensland health system industrial agreement, negotiated between the health service and the union covering your profession – so the same role can sit on a different scale in another state. In the private sector, pay is negotiated individually and is often higher, particularly where a service is hard to staff.

We do not publish figures we have not verified against the agreement that actually governs the role. For the indicative bands and how the frameworks work, see Salary in Australia, explained honestly.

What to ask at interview

How is the current hospital redevelopment expected to affect my role and team?

Which cases go to Brisbane or the Sunshine Coast, and how is that handled day to day?

How many colleagues sit alongside me in my specialty specifically?

What is the on-call pattern, and how often is it genuinely called upon?

Which modalities or sub-specialties would I be expected to cover?

What CPD time and funding is provided, and does it cover travel to Brisbane?

Is there scope to cross-train, and is that supported or just permitted?

The short version

Bundaberg is a regional health service investing heavily to keep pace with a growing catchment, which is why the day-to-day scope is wider than the city's size suggests. The trade is a smaller bench and a genuine trip to Brisbane for tertiary care — and for imaging specifically, real breadth in a service that is actively expanding.

Where clinicians live

Bundaberg Guide · Chapter 5 of 9

Bundaberg is compact enough that most commutes stay under fifteen minutes, which frees you to choose on lifestyle rather than logistics. The real decision is coastal, central, or the rural fringe.

Make one decision first

Before you look at a single listing: fix your work site. The hospital precinct sits at Thabeban, on the southern side of the city, while other clinics and services are more central — and while nothing here is a long drive, the difference between a five-minute and a twenty-minute commute is worth knowing before you sign a lease.

Then choose your shape of life. Coastal means Bargara and the beach. Central means the heritage streets and the river. Rural fringe means space, cane-country views, and a car is essential.

The areas, honestly

The city centre & North Bundaberg

Heritage streets and cafés, closest to the river and the CBD. Suits people who want to walk to dinner.

Bargara & Innes Park

The coastal choice, fifteen minutes from the centre. Popular with families and a growing retiree population, with newer housing stock.

Kalkie & Ashfield

Between the city and the coast, family suburbs with good access both ways.

Norville, Avenell Heights & Millbank

Established, central suburbs close to schools and the CBD.

Thabeban & Svensson Heights

Close to the hospital precinct — Thabeban is where the new hospital is being built — practical for shift work.

Elliott Heads

Further south along the coast, quieter again than Bargara, popular for a slower pace.

The rural fringe (Rubyanna, Branyan, Qunaba)

Larger blocks and cane-country views. A car is essential, and it suits people who want space over proximity.

Renting first is the sensible order

Almost everyone we place rents for six to twelve months before buying, and Bundaberg's growth means it is worth doing here too — the current hospital build and the wider region's growth are keeping demand for good rentals strong. Arriving with something secured for your first month takes the pressure off the decision that matters more.

How leases, bonds, applications and tenancy rights work is the same across Australia and is covered once in Moving to Australia. Nothing about renting in Bundaberg is legally different; it is the local supply and demand that vary.

Practical, in order

Fix your work site before you choose a suburb.

Decide between coastal, central, or the rural fringe.

Rent for the first six to twelve months, and secure something before you fly.

Walk the street at the time of day you would actually be coming home.

If schools matter, check catchments before you sign — they do not always follow the suburb boundary.

The short version

Nowhere in Bundaberg is a difficult commute, so choose on the life rather than the drive. Bargara for the beach, the centre for walkability, the rural fringe for space — and rent first, while the region keeps growing around a major hospital build.

Getting around

Bundaberg Guide · Chapter 6 of 9

The honest summary: you will need a car, you will use it constantly rather than occasionally, and Brisbane is a real trip rather than a quick hop, by road or by air.

Inside the city

Most trips across Bundaberg take ten to fifteen minutes. A local bus network exists but is limited, and it is not built for shift work — most clinicians drive. Parking is generally easy and often free, a real change if you are arriving from a capital city.

~15 min

Most trips across the city

4 hrs

To Brisbane by road

~70 min

Flight time to Brisbane

Getting to Brisbane

By road

About four hours down the Bruce Highway. Straightforward, and a normal weekend trip if you plan around it.

By air

The regional airport runs direct flights to Brisbane in around seventy minutes — the quickest option if time matters more than cost.

By rail

Bundaberg sits on the Brisbane–Cairns line, with regional and tilt-train services calling. Slower than flying, and a genuine option if you would rather not drive.

By coach

Regional coach services run the highway corridor and are the fallback if you are without a car.

The car question, answered plainly

Yes, essential. Bargara, Elliott Heads, Mon Repos and the cane-country day trips are not on a transit route, and shift work does not fit a limited bus timetable. If you are a two-adult household, plan for two cars; some manage on one for the first year if one partner is not commuting.

Licence conversion, importing a vehicle, insurance and registration all work the same way across Australia and are covered once in Living in Australia. Nothing about it is specific to Bundaberg.

First-month practicalities

Sort a car early – the regional used market is thinner than a capital's, so give yourself options.

Check whether your accommodation has off-street parking. Most does; it is worth confirming.

If you are commuting from the coast, drive the route at your actual start time once before you commit.

Book flights or the train early around school holidays, when Brisbane demand from the region rises.

The short version

A car is essential inside the city and outside it. Fifteen minutes to anything local, four hours or a short flight to Brisbane – and the car earns its keep on the coast and the cane-country day trips, not the commute.

Cost of living

Bundaberg Guide · Chapter 7 of 9

Housing is the whole story. Almost everything else in Bundaberg costs roughly what it costs in Brisbane, and one or two things cost more – which is a more useful way to think about it than a single index number.

Why there are no dollar figures on this page

We publish rents and prices only where we have verified them against current data, and a figure that was true when a page was written is misleading a year later. Rather than print numbers we cannot stand behind, this chapter tells you the shape of the difference and where to check the current position yourself. For the national picture – tax, superannuation, Medicare, banking and what a first year actually costs – see Money, tax & banking in Australia.

What costs materially less

Bundaberg Housing – the largest single difference

Brisbane Noticeably higher to rent and to buy

Sydney A different order of magnitude

Relative widths are illustrative of direction, not measured values. Check current listings and the ABS or state data before you budget.

Housing, rented or bought

The reason people move here and stay. What a clinical salary carries in Bundaberg is not comparable to what it carries in Brisbane or a southern capital, and the difference compounds over a career.

Parking and commuting

Generally free, and generally fifteen minutes. Two costs that quietly disappear when you leave a capital city.

A family home near the water

Genuinely achievable on a single clinical income in a way it is not in most of coastal Australia.

What costs about the same

Groceries, fuel, insurance, utilities, phone and internet all sit close to the Queensland-wide level. Australia is a national market for most of this, and Bundaberg is a large enough centre to have real competition. Do not expect a regional discount on the weekly shop; do not expect a penalty either.

What costs more

Flying beyond Brisbane

Most other domestic and all international flights connect through Brisbane, so budget for that leg as part of any trip further afield.

Anything with a small local market

Specialist trades, some vehicle servicing, particular hobbies and equipment. Not dramatically, but the choice is narrower and that shows in price.

The one-off costs of the first year

These are the ones people underestimate, and they are the same wherever in Australia you land: visa and registration fees, flights, shipping or replacing furniture, a car, a rental bond, and the gap between arriving and your first pay. Preparing to move covers the national picture, and our relocation cost calculator will give you a personal estimate.

Where to check the current position

Current rental listings for the specific suburbs in Where clinicians live – the fastest reality check there is. State and ABS housing data for medians, rather than any figure on a recruiter's website.

Ask us what a role actually pays before you model anything. We will tell you the framework and the range.

The short version

Treat Bundaberg as Queensland prices with a materially cheaper roof over your head, plus a travel premium once you go beyond Brisbane. The housing difference is the entire argument, and it is a large one.

Food, the market & the everyday

Bundaberg Guide · Chapter 8 of 9

The test of a place is not its best restaurant. It is what an ordinary Wednesday feels like, and whether Saturday morning has a shape. Bundaberg does well on both, built around fresh produce and a short drive to the water.

The market and the produce are the centre of gravity

Bundaberg sits at the heart of one of Queensland's significant food-growing regions — alongside the cane, the area produces major volumes of macadamias, avocados and other small crops. The local market reflects it: genuinely fresh, genuinely local, and cheap enough that cooking at home becomes the default rather than the virtuous choice.

The historic rum distillery draws its own visitor trade and gives the city centre a landmark to build a Saturday around, alongside the cafés along the Burnett River foreshore.

Eating out, honestly assessed

What is good

Fresh seafood and local produce, and a café scene that has improved noticeably around the CBD and Bargara in recent years.

What is thinner

Range, compared with Brisbane. A specific cuisine may mean cooking it yourself, or a trip to Hervey Bay or Brisbane for the occasional fix.

Where the produce comes from

The canefields and horticultural land surrounding the city — genuinely local, and part of why the market is worth the trip.

Where to find groceries from home

The main supermarkets carry more than they used to, and the region's size supports a handful of specialist grocers. For anything unusual, plan a Brisbane trip.

A week, once the novelty has worn off

Weekdays

A short commute and light left in the evening

The thing people mention most is arriving home early enough for the evening to still exist.

Saturday morning

The market, then the coast

Local produce first, then Bargara or Elliott Heads depending on the tide and the mood.

Turtle season (Nov–Mar)

A genuine family ritual

An evening at Mon Repos to watch nesting or hatchlings is the kind of thing you do once for the novelty and then keep doing every year.

Sunday

The reef, occasionally, or nothing at all

A day cruise to the southern reef islands when the weather allows it, or Elliott Heads for something quieter.

Finding your people

Bundaberg is small enough that joining something is the fastest route in — a surf club, a cricket club, a parents' committee. Clinicians consistently tell us the professional community here is close, partly because the service is growing together rather than already established and closed.

On the wider question of community, faith and belonging — and being honest that a regional city carries smaller communities than a capital does — see Community & belonging in Australia.

The short version

Genuinely fresh local produce, an improving café scene, and eating out that is better than the population might suggest but narrower in range than Brisbane. The real change is the shape of the week — a short commute buys back the evening, and turtle season gives the year its own rhythm.

Mon Repos, the reef & the weekend

Bundaberg Guide · Chapter 9 of 9

This is the argument for Bundaberg that needs the least explaining. You are living on the doorstep of the southern Great Barrier Reef, with a nationally significant turtle rookery a fifteen-minute drive away.

Fifteen to twenty minutes: Bargara & Mon Repos

Bundaberg's coast and its main beach suburb, with calm swimming beaches, coral rock pools and a headland walk. Mon Repos, just north, is Australia's largest mainland loggerhead turtle rookery — nesting and hatchling season runs roughly November to March, and it is the kind of thing that stays a family ritual long after the novelty wears off.

The southern Great Barrier Reef, a day cruise or a scenic flight from Bundaberg.

Thirty minutes: Elliott Heads & Coral Cove

Quieter than Bargara, with the Elliott River mouth for fishing and paddling as well as the beach. This is where people go when they want the coast without anyone else on it.

By boat or by air: Lady Musgrave & Lady Elliot Islands

Lady Musgrave Island

A day cruise from the Port of Bundaberg or Town of 1770 out to a coral cay and lagoon — snorkelling on the southern Great Barrier Reef without the far-north crowds.

Lady Elliot Island

Reachable by a short scenic flight, with some of the most reliable manta ray and turtle encounters on the reef.

Ninety minutes: Agnes Water & the Town of 1770

Queensland's northernmost surf beach, and the site of Cook's second landing on the Australian coast. Part of the Discovery Coast that the region's health service also covers, and a genuine day trip or overnight from Bundaberg.

In the city itself

A tour of the historic rum distillery

The Burnett River foreshore and its walking paths

Baldwin Swamp wetlands, a short walk from the centre

The Bundaberg Botanic Gardens, including the Hinkler aviation heritage exhibit

Local produce and craft markets

Turtle watching at Mon Repos in season

A drive through the canefields at crushing season

Sunset at Bargara headland

“

You get the reef without the queue, and the turtles without the tour bus.

The Coral Coast, in one sentence

The short version

Bargara in fifteen minutes, the turtle rookery a family ritual every summer, and the southern Great Barrier Reef a day trip rather than a holiday. Bundaberg is not near the reef — it is one of the closest cities to it, and that is what keeps people here after the job stops being new.

Where to next

The national guide

Moving to Australia

Visas, registration, Medicare, tax, schools and renting — explained once, for the whole country.

A bigger coastal city

Gold Coast

More amenities and a bigger bench, if that is what you are weighing against Bundaberg.

Live roles

Current opportunities

What is open now across Australia, including regional Queensland.

No pressure

Talk it through

Whether you are curious or close to deciding, a conversation costs nothing.