Mandurah

Bindjareb Noongar Country

A relocation guide for healthcare professionals and their families. The work, the neighbourhoods, the money and the weekends in Mandurah.

Dolphins in the estuary. Perth up the line.

Mandurah is a city built around water: a vast, sheltered estuary, canals threading through the suburbs and a long Indian Ocean coast, all under an hour south of Perth. Once the place Perth went for its holidays, it has grown into one of Western Australia's fastest-growing cities, and a lovely base for clinicians who want a coastal life with the capital close at hand.

Why clinicians choose Mandurah

People are drawn to Mandurah for the water and the space, and they stay for the easy, outdoor rhythm of a city that still feels like a coastal town.

If you're looking for the buzz of a capital on your doorstep and the most complex tertiary work in your own building, Mandurah may not be it. But if you're drawn to estuary mornings, room for the family and Perth just up the train line, it could be a wonderful choice.

Mandurah's great gift is a genuine waterside life. Depending on where you live, that might be a canal at the bottom of the garden, the calm estuary for paddling and crabbing, or a surf beach on the Indian Ocean side, and in most of the city all three are within a short drive. Dolphins feed in the estuary and the marina, pelicans patrol the foreshore, and evenings tend to end with the sun going down over the sea.

It also offers space and value. Housing here generally costs less than in Perth's coastal suburbs, and because Mandurah is still growing, new schools, estates and services are being built rather than stretched. Families often find they can have a bigger home, a shorter run to the beach and a calmer week than they could closer to the city.

For work, the city has a busy regional health campus that is being expanded, a strong community and primary care network and a steady private imaging presence. The Mandurah train line reaches central Perth in around fifty minutes, so a role in the city while living on the coast is a realistic plan rather than a stretch.

WHAT YOU GAIN

Life on the water

Estuary, canals and ocean in one city: paddleboarding before work, crabbing in summer and dolphins in the bay.

Space and value

Generally more home for your money than in coastal Perth, with newer family estates to the north and south.

Perth within reach

A fast train and a direct freeway put the capital's hospitals, airport and city life under an hour away.

A growing city

New housing, schools and a major expansion of the local hospital campus: a place on the way up.

GOOD TO KNOW

Tertiary work is in Perth

The most complex and subspecialty care is an hour north. It suits you best if you enjoy a broad general caseload, or are happy to commute for the rest.

Warm, dry summers

Summers are long and hot, softened by the afternoon sea breeze. A home with good shade and cooling makes them a pleasure.

A car-friendly city

Outside the rail corridor, most families run a car. Worth planning for when you choose where to live.

A relaxed pace

Mandurah is unhurried and outdoorsy rather than busy and urban. If that is what you are after, you will settle in quickly.

A city shaped by the estuary

Mandurah makes most sense once you see that it is built around an estuary rather than a high street. Where people live, how they spend their weekends and how long anything takes all follow from the water.

The city wraps around the mouth of the Peel-Harvey estuary, one of the largest estuarine systems in Australia, where the Serpentine, Murray and Harvey rivers meet the sea. The Peel Inlet and the long Harvey Estuary spread out behind the coast, roughly twice the size of Sydney Harbour, and the Dawesville Cut, a channel opened in the 1990s, links the estuary to the ocean and keeps its water fresh and clear.

The city centre, the marina and the rebuilt Eastern Foreshore sit right on the water, with canal estates threading the suburbs around them. To the north, newer family suburbs stretch along the rail line towards Rockingham and Perth; to the south, Halls Head, Falcon and Dawesville run along a dune coast towards Yalgorup National Park. Inland lie Pinjarra, farmland and then the forested Darling Scarp.

Around 90,000 people live in Greater Mandurah, about seventy kilometres south of the Perth CBD, at the meeting point of the Perth region and the South West. For a long time it was a holiday and retirement town; since the railway arrived in 2007 it has become a city of young families, commuters and people who simply love the water.

Summer

DEC - FEB

Hot, dry and sunny, often in the thirties, with the afternoon sea breeze cooling the coast most days. Crabbing season, long beach evenings and bushfire season, so keep an eye on the official alerts.

Autumn

MAR - MAY

Many locals' favourite time: the water is still warm, the days are settled and the city's crab festival fills the foreshore in March.

Winter

JUN - AUG

Mild and green, with most of the year's rain arriving on Indian Ocean fronts. Cool rather than cold, and lovely for forest walks inland.

Spring

SEP - NOV

Wildflowers in the bush, warming days and, by the end of it, the first proper swims of the season.

A note on Country

Mandurah stands on Bindjareb (also written Pinjarup) Noongar Country, part of the wider Noongar nation of the south-west. The estuary has sustained Bindjareb people for tens of thousands of years, and the city's name is widely understood to come from the Noongar word Mandjar, a meeting place, which you will see in names like Mandjar Bay. Inland, Pinjarra carries an important and painful chapter of the region's history, which the community remembers openly. Your cultural induction is a good place to begin learning, and Acknowledgement of Country opens many meetings and events.

Healthcare and work in Mandurah

Mandurah gives you a busy regional health base with Perth's tertiary system close enough to lean on, and a local hospital campus in the middle of a major expansion.

The Peel region's main hospital is a general health campus in Mandurah that looks after a large and growing population across the city and its surrounding shires, with emergency, surgical, medical, maternity and outpatient services. Since 2024 it has been run directly by one of the state's metropolitan public health services, which links it closely with the tertiary teaching hospitals in Perth's south.

A significant redevelopment is under way, bringing more inpatient beds, an extra operating theatre, chemotherapy places, a palliative care hospice, expanded outpatients, new medical imaging services and more mental health care. For clinicians, that means a campus that is growing its services and its teams, and a good moment to join.

Around the hospital sits a broad community network: general practices, community and mental health services, Aboriginal community-controlled health care, and a steady private imaging and pathology presence across the city. The most complex, high-acuity and subspecialty work is concentrated in Perth's tertiary hospitals, under an hour north, and patients move up and down that pathway as they need to.

ACROSS THE CITY

Private imaging and pathology

A steady private sector, especially in medical imaging, serving a growing and active population.

For medical imaging, which is where much of our current Western Australian recruitment sits, the local picture usually means a broad general caseload in Mandurah, with more of the subspecialty and interventional work weighted towards the city. Many clinicians enjoy exactly that variety, and the short train ride means professional development, conferences and colleagues in Perth are never far away.

What to ask at interview

- ☐ What is the case and modality mix, and which equipment will you be working with?
- ☐ How much of the specialist work stays local, and how much is referred to Perth?
- ☐ The roster: shift patterns, on-call frequency and how cover works across sites.
- ☐ What supervision and orientation you will have in your first months, particularly if this is your first role in Australia.
- ☐ How the hospital redevelopment will change the service and your team over the next few years.
- ☐ Pay follows WA awards and agreements; we quote no figures and will walk you through the current one for your profession.
- ☐ Salary packaging, relocation support and funded CPD, including time for courses in Perth.

Registration and licensing

You will need Ahpra registration through your profession's National Board before you can practise, and the same registration covers the whole country. Medical radiation practitioners also need a Western Australian radiation licence, a state requirement on top of registration. Start both early: paperwork is usually what sets your start date. As in the rest of Western Australia, Mandurah is currently treated as regional for skilled migration, so ask us how that might help you.

Where to live in Mandurah

In Mandurah the first question is not which suburb but which water, and how close to the train you would like to be. Answer those two and the shortlist almost writes itself.

~10 MIN · ESTUARY & OCEAN

Halls Head & Erskine

Just across the bridge from the centre, between the estuary and the beach: established streets, canal homes and the ocean at the end of the road.

~5-10 MIN · WATER AT THE DOOR

Dudley Park & the canals

Canal and estuary frontage, sometimes with a mooring at the end of the garden. The postcard end of the market, priced accordingly.

WALK TO THE MARINA

Mandurah centre & the foreshore

Apartments and older homes near the Eastern Foreshore, cafés, the marina and the bus link to the station. The most walkable part of the city.

~10-15 MIN · FAMILY ESTATES

Meadow Springs & Lakelands

Newer family suburbs to the north with parks, schools and a train station at Lakelands. Popular with commuters heading to Perth.

~15 MIN · BEACHSIDE NORTH

Madora Bay & San Remo

Quiet beachside estates on the ocean coast north of the city, with bigger blocks and newer homes.

~15-20 MIN · SOUTH COAST

Falcon & Dawesville

Relaxed coastal suburbs to the south near the Dawesville Cut, with beaches, the estuary and Yalgorup National Park nearby.

~10 MIN · CENTRAL VALUE

Greenfields & Coodanup

Central, affordable suburbs close to the hospital, the main shopping centre, TAFE and the university campus.

~20-25 MIN · COUNTRY TOWN

Pinjarra & the hills

A historic river town inland, with farmland, horse country and the forest close by. Lovely for space; plan ahead for the bushfire season.

Most newcomers rent for six months to a year before choosing for good. A useful exercise is to rank three things in your own order: which water you want to be near (canal, estuary or ocean), how much space you would like for the money, and how close to the Mandurah line you need to be if Perth is part of your plan. It is rare to have all three in one street, and being clear on your order is what leads you to the right part of the city.

If your work is in Mandurah itself, almost anywhere in the city is a short drive. If you will commute to Perth, look first at the northern suburbs near Lakelands station or at homes with an easy run to Mandurah station's park-and-ride.

A shaded suburban playground in Bunbury, an hour south: parks like this are a feature of new estates across the region

On the ocean side of the city, the beach is part of the after-school routine

Before you sign a lease

- ☐ Which water is it near, and how do you want to use it: boating, paddling, swimming or surfing?
- ☐ How long is the drive to your workplace, and to Mandurah or Lakelands station if you will use the train?
- ☐ Cooling and shade: what kind of air conditioning is there, and does the home catch the sea breeze?
- ☐ On the bushland fringe or inland: what is the bushfire rating, and what is the plan?
- ☐ Is it in the local-intake area for the public school you want? Places are linked to your address.

Getting around Mandurah

Mandurah is an easy, car-friendly city with one great asset: a fast train that reaches the heart of Perth in under an hour.

The Mandurah line is part of Perth's Transperth network. Trains run from Mandurah station, with Lakelands station serving the northern suburbs, up the freeway corridor through Rockingham to the Perth CBD in around fifty minutes, with park-and-ride along the way. Local buses connect the suburbs to the station, and the same SmartRider card (or a contactless bank card) works on trains and buses alike.

Day to day, most people drive. Getting across town usually takes fifteen to twenty minutes, and traffic is rarely a daily event. The Kwinana Freeway and Forrest Highway carry you north to Perth and south to Bunbury and the South West, and there are no toll roads in Western Australia. The foreshore and marina are lovely on foot, and shared paths follow much of the estuary and coast, so a bike is a happy addition.

Driving licences

Licence conversion is handled by the WA Department of Transport, which has a centre in Mandurah. Licences from many countries can be converted without a driving test, but there is a time limit for driving on an overseas licence once you live here, so check their 'moving to WA' guidance soon after you arrive. Australians drive on the left; take care with kangaroos around dawn and dusk on country roads.

Worth planning for

- ✓ One car works well if you live near the rail line; two is common in the outer estates.
- ✓ Transperth's journey planner covers both the train and the local buses.
- ✓ If you will commute to Perth, try the journey at your real start time before you choose a suburb.

What it costs to live here

Living in Mandurah generally costs less than in Perth's coastal suburbs, especially on housing, and the best things here, the water, the beaches and the sunsets, are free.

We don't print prices in our guides, because a figure that is right today can mislead a year from now. What stays true is the shape of the budget. Housing is where Mandurah shines: for similar money you are usually closer to the water than in comparable Perth suburbs, and the newer estates offer more house again. Groceries, services and everyday costs sit broadly in line with the rest of the Perth region.

Two lines are worth planning for: keeping a home comfortable through a long, warm summer, and the cost of distance, whether that is fuel or fares for a Perth commute or the drive to the airport for trips home. Public-health roles can also salary-package part of your pay before tax, which helps the monthly sums.

Where a month goes

These are shares of a mid-range monthly budget for one person, not amounts. Rent is still the biggest line, and in Mandurah it usually takes a smaller share than in Perth's coastal suburbs.

COMPARED WITH PERTH

Housing

Generally less than coastal Perth, with more space and water views within reach.

Everyday spending

Groceries, eating out and services are broadly similar to the rest of the Perth region.

WORTH PLANNING FOR

Summer cooling

A shaded home that catches the sea breeze does a lot of the work for you.

Distance

Fuel or fares if you commute, and the hour's drive to the airport for flights home.

Beach days, estuary paddles and foreshore picnics cost nothing, which is why weekends here go so far

Camping under the trees is a classic, inexpensive weekend in Western Australia's south-west

IN SHORT

- ✓ Housing is the big win: generally more space, and more water, for your money than in coastal Perth.
- ✓ Everyday costs are much like Perth's; plan for summer cooling and the cost of the commute if you will use the city.
- ✓ The setting-up period (bond, rent in advance, a car) is the same wherever you land, so budget for it from the start.

SOPHIE'S INSIGHTS

What I tell people about Mandurah

Mandurah is the place I suggest when someone tells me they want the sea, space for the children and a gentler pace, but do not want to be cut off. You can stand on the foreshore watching dolphins in the morning and be in central Perth for lunch, and that combination is quite rare.

The conversation I always have is about the work itself. The local campus is growing and the caseload is broad and rewarding, while the most specialised work is an hour up the line. If you love variety, or you are happy to make that short trip when your career needs it, Mandurah can give your family a beautiful life by the water, and I love seeing people discover it.

Food, shopping and everyday life

In Mandurah the estuary sets the table. Blue swimmer crabs, fresh seafood and waterfront cafés are at the heart of the everyday, and much of life is lived outdoors.

The Peel estuary is famous for its blue swimmer crabs, and crabbing with a scoop net in the shallows or a drop net off a jetty is a genuine local institution, enjoyed within the seasonal size and bag rules. Each March the city celebrates with the Mandurah Crab Fest on the foreshore, one of the biggest free festivals in the state. Fish and chips at the marina, a seafood lunch overlooking the water and a coffee on the Eastern Foreshore round out a very Mandurah weekend.

For the weekly shop, Woolworths, Coles, ALDI and IGA are all here, with Mandurah Forum on Pinjarra Road the largest shopping centre. The Mandjar Markets bring local makers and food to the Eastern Foreshore on Sundays through the warmer months, and there are seasonal twilight and winter markets too. For a wider range of Asian, Indian, African and halal groceries, many families combine a trip to Rockingham or Perth's southern suburbs with a day out.

An ordinary week here has an easy, outdoor rhythm: a walk or a swim before work, children's sport after school, the beach or the estuary while the light lasts and a barbecue on the foreshore at the weekend. Mandurah is friendly and community-minded, and its multicultural community is growing, with active Filipino, African, German-speaking and Muslim community groups, a Gaelic football club started by Irish locals, and the City's own multicultural networking group. What people do at the weekend

From Mandurah, weekends go three ways: out onto the water, inland to the jarrah forest, or south to a national park of quiet lakes and beaches.

Start with the water. Bottlenose dolphins live in the estuary and are often seen in Mandjar Bay, around the marina and along the canals, and an estuary cruise is a lovely first weekend. Kayaking and paddleboarding on the calm water, fishing from the jetties, crabbing in the shallows and swimming at the ocean beaches fill most summer weekends, and the foreshore boardwalk is made for an evening stroll.

About forty minutes inland, Dwellingup is the gateway to the northern jarrah forest: walking on the Bibbulmun Track, cycling on the Munda Biddi Trail, mountain biking, canoeing and whitewater on the Murray River, and the Hotham Valley heritage train. It stays cooler than the coast in summer and is green and misty in winter. To the south, Yalgorup National Park protects a chain of quiet lakes, coastal woodland and beaches, and at Lake Clifton you can see thrombolites, living rock-like structures that echo some of the earliest life on earth.

Around Mandurah

Mandurah sits right at the hinge between the Perth region and the South West, so both the capital and some of Western Australia's most beautiful country are within easy reach.

Head north and you are quickly in Rockingham, with its sheltered beaches and Penguin Island, then Fremantle and Perth, with the state's international airport, its tertiary hospitals and the culture of a capital. Head south on the Forrest Highway and Bunbury, the main city of the South West, is about an hour away, with its own dolphins and a lively waterfront. Beyond it lie Busselton's famous jetty and the vineyards, surf beaches, caves and karri forests of Margaret River, an easy long weekend.

Inland, the Darling Scarp rises into jarrah forest at Dwellingup, with the Bibbulmun Track and the Munda Biddi Trail running north and south through the trees. And when the family wants snow, the nearest ski fields are a flight east: around four hours to Melbourne, then a drive into the Victorian Alps, which many West Australians make into a winter adventure.

Families and schools in Mandurah

Mandurah is a wonderful place for children: beaches, calm water, parks and sport everywhere, and a growing city that keeps building new schools for its young families.

Home time: the school day here finishes early enough for the beach

Calm estuary water makes kayaking and sailing an easy part of childhood here

Western Australian schooling begins with Kindergarten, a part-time, non-compulsory year for four-year-olds, usually at the local primary school. Pre-primary is the first compulsory year, then primary school runs from Year 1 to Year 6 and secondary school from Year 7 to Year 12, finishing with the WA Certificate of Education (WACE) and, for university entry, an ATAR. Across four terms, the school year starts in early February and finishes in mid-December.

There are three sectors. Public schools are run by the WA Department of Education and enrol by local-intake area, so your home address decides your guaranteed local school. Catholic schools are part of Catholic Education Western Australia (Mandurah sits in the Diocese of Bunbury), and independent schools, many of them faith-based, set their own enrolment and fees. Mandurah has a good spread of all three, including long-established schools such as John Tonkin College (public), Mandurah Catholic College, Mandurah Baptist College and Frederick Irwin Anglican School, as well as newer public colleges in the growth suburbs.

School fees on a temporary visa

If you come on a temporary visa, Western Australia may charge a fee for your children to attend a public school. For the common skilled work visas this is a yearly fee charged per family rather than per child, administered on behalf of the WA Department of Education by TAFE International WA. Check the current rules for your visa on the Department's page for children who are dependants of visa holders before you plan your budget, and ask your employer whether they help with it.

Choosing a school

- ☐ Check the local-intake area for the exact address before you sign a lease, using the Department of Education's Schools Online finder.
- ☐ Look at a school's profile on the My School website, and visit or ask for a video call.
- ☐ If your child is still building their English, ask how the school's English as an Additional Language or Dialect (EAL/D) support works.
- ☐ Uniforms are usually sold through the school's own uniform shop, often run by the parents' association, which also sells good second-hand items.
- ☐ Catholic and independent schools can have waiting lists, so contact them early.

What children tend to love here

- ☒ Spotting dolphins from the boardwalk, and a cruise on the estuary.
- ☒ Surf-lifesaving 'Nippers' at the ocean beaches and swimming lessons from an early age.
- ☒ The foreshore playgrounds and the summer water play areas.
- ☒ Crabbing on warm evenings with a scoop net and a bucket.
- ☒ Forest camping and river swims at Dwellingup.
- ☒ Club sport for every age: Aussie rules, soccer, netball, basketball, cricket and more.

Early childhood

For younger children, Mandurah has long day care centres, family day care and playgroups in most suburbs. Fees can be reduced by the Australian Government's Child Care Subsidy, though whether you qualify depends on your visa; Services Australia can confirm before you budget.

Six steps, and someone beside you for each one

Moving country is a sequence of decisions. We take them with you in order, so you are never solving step five before step two is done.

STEP 1

Discovery call

A relaxed conversation about your profession, your family and what you want from a move. No forms, no pressure.

STEP 2

Eligibility & registration

We map your route to Ahpra registration and help you gather the evidence the regulator will ask for.

STEP 3

Opportunities & interviews

Roles matched to where you want to live and how you like to work, with honest briefings before every interview.

STEP 4

Offer & decision support

We help you read the offer properly: pay step, relocation support, roster and what the team is really like.

STEP 5

Visa & relocation guidance

Practical guidance on visas, shipping, pets, schools and the first weeks, so nothing arrives as a surprise.

STEP 6

Settling in

We stay in touch after you land, from your first week on the ward to your first winter.

— READY TO EXPLORE OPPORTUNITIES?

Picture yourself in Mandurah. Then let's make it real.

Tell us what you do and where you would like to live. We will come back with roles that fit, a clear view of the registration route, and time to answer every question.
