Bunbury

Goomburrup

A relocation guide for healthcare professionals and their families. The work, the neighbourhoods, the money and the weekends in Bunbury.

Three waterfronts. A fifteen-minute life.

Bunbury is the city at the heart of Western Australia's South West: a relaxed port city two hours south of Perth, with an ocean surf coast, a calm bay where wild dolphins live and a wide estuary all inside the city limits. Clinicians come for a referral hospital with a case mix far broader than the city's size, and stay for short commutes, room to live and some of Australia's loveliest weekend country on the doorstep.

Why clinicians choose Bunbury

Most people who move here are swapping a big-city commute for more coastline, more time and more responsibility at work. Bunbury makes that swap easy, and keeps Perth within a comfortable drive.

If you're looking for a big-city department with a subspecialty team of thirty, Bunbury may not be it. If you're drawn to real clinical breadth, a ten-minute drive to work and a beach at the end of the day, it could be a wonderful choice.

Bunbury is Western Australia's largest city outside the Perth metropolitan area, home to around 75,000 people across Greater Bunbury. It sits on a peninsula on the Indian Ocean coast, about 175 kilometres south of Perth, with Koombana Bay to the north and the Leschenault Estuary curving behind it. It grew up as a port, and the port still works, which is why the city has the infrastructure of a much bigger place: a regional referral hospital, a university campus, a regional theatre and art gallery, and a farmers' market people happily drive an hour to reach.

For clinicians the attraction is specific. The city's main public hospital is the referral centre for the whole South West, a region of towns, farms, forests and coast, so the work arriving at your door is broader and more varied than a city of this size would usually generate. Alongside it sits a genuine private sector, including the South West's only PET service. You get regional responsibility without remoteness: Perth's tertiary centres are a two-hour drive away, not a flight.

And then there is the life around the work. Surf on one side of town, flat water on the other, an estuary for kayaking and crabbing, and the vineyards of the Ferguson Valley half an hour inland. Busselton, Dunsborough and Margaret River, the places other Western Australians drive four hours to reach for a holiday, are your ordinary weekends.

WHAT YOU GAIN

Breadth and earlier responsibility

Work comes in from across the South West, and smaller specialist teams mean your judgement is trusted and your name is on decisions sooner.

Time back every day

Most commutes are ten to fifteen minutes, with easy parking. Over a year that is weeks of your life returned.

A home with room

Housing costs noticeably less than in Perth, and far less than Sydney or Melbourne, so one clinical salary stretches a long way.

Three coastlines in one city

Ocean surf, a calm bay and an estuary, each a few minutes from home. You never have to choose.

GOOD TO KNOW

A close-knit specialist team

Depth exists in most specialties, but as a handful of colleagues rather than a large department. Ask how many people sit alongside you in your area.

Perth for the most complex work

The most specialised cases are referred north to the capital, a normal and well-worn pathway. Which cases depends on your specialty, so it is a great interview question.

Plan your first month's home

The rental market moves with the region's big industrial projects, so arriving with somewhere secured for the first few weeks takes the pressure off.

A regional city's pace

Bunbury has a theatre, galleries and good coffee, and a friendly, know-your-neighbours feel. For a big concert or a long-haul flight, Perth is two hours up the road.

Weighing up your options?

People often compare Bunbury with Perth, for a large tertiary system and the capital's lifestyle, and with Mandurah, for waterside living closer to the city. If you need a big subspecialty team around you, Perth may suit you best, and it is close enough that Bunbury can still be a later move. If you are drawn to regional breadth, short commutes and the South West on your doorstep, Bunbury is hard to beat. We are always happy to talk the options through.

IN SHORT

- ✓ A referral centre's case mix in a friendly city of 75,000.
- ✓ Ten to fifteen minutes to work, and Perth two hours away when you want it.
- ✓ Surf, bay, estuary and wine country, all part of an ordinary week.

A port city between ocean, bay and estuary

Bunbury makes sense the moment you see its shape: a compact centre on a peninsula with water on three sides. Where you live, which beach you use and how you spend a Sunday all follow from that.

The Indian Ocean runs down the city's western edge, with surf beaches, basalt rocks and dunes. To the north is Koombana Bay, sheltered water beside the port and the Marlston waterfront, where a resident population of wild bottlenose dolphins feeds and plays. Behind the city lies the Leschenault Estuary, calm and shallow, edged with the southernmost mangroves in Western Australia.

The centre is small and walkable, with the waterfront, cafés, the entertainment centre and the art gallery all close together. Suburbs spread south along the coast towards Dalyellup and Gelorup, and north-east across the estuary to Eaton and Australind. Beyond the city edge the land rises gently into farmland, forest and the green hills of the Ferguson Valley.

Summer

DEC – FEB

Warm to hot, dry and sunny, with highs usually around the high twenties to low thirties. The afternoon sea breeze arrives most days, so mornings are for the ocean beaches and afternoons for the calm bay.

Autumn

MAR – MAY

Many locals' favourite season: warm water, settled days and quieter beaches once the summer visitors have gone home.

Winter

JUN – AUG

Mild and green, with daytime highs in the high teens. This is the rainy season, when fronts roll in off the Indian Ocean, the estuary fills and the inland valleys turn lush.

Spring

SEP – NOV

Wildflowers inland, whales passing offshore and the first swims of the year by November.

Good to know about the winter

The South West is the green, rain-fed corner of a dry state, and its wet season is real. A good raincoat, a warm, dry home and an indoor plan for wet weekends make June to August cosy rather than grey; it is also when the forests, waterfalls and wineries are at their most beautiful.

○ Wardandi Noongar Country

TENS OF THOUSANDS OF YEARS

Bunbury is Goomburrup, on Wardandi Noongar Country in the south-west of the Noongar nation. The coast, estuary and rivers have been cared for by Wardandi people for millennia.

○ A port on the bay

1830S ONWARDS

European settlement grew around the sheltered anchorage of Koombana Bay, and the port has been the city's reason for being ever since.

○ Timber, minerals and alumina

20TH CENTURY

Jarrah and karri, then mineral sands and alumina, flowed out through Bunbury, funding the roads, rail and services the region relies on.

○ A city that faces the water

TODAY

The waterfront has been rebuilt for people, a university campus has arrived, and Bunbury serves the whole South West as its administrative, retail and clinical centre.

Acknowledging Country

- ✓ Bunbury sits on Wardandi Noongar Country. The Noongar name for this place is Goomburrup.
- ✓ Acknowledgements of Country open meetings and events across the region, and it is warmly appreciated when newcomers take time to learn whose Country they live and work on.
- ✓ Look out for local Noongar-led tours, art and NAIDOC Week events: a lovely way to begin understanding the place.

Healthcare and work in Bunbury

Bunbury's clinical role is bigger than its population, for one simple reason: it is where the South West sends its patients. Understanding that referral role is the key to understanding the work.

Public healthcare in regional Western Australia is delivered by the state's country health service. In Bunbury that means the region's main public hospital, a modern health campus that acts as the referral centre for the South West. It takes patients from district hospitals in the surrounding towns and provides the specialist services those towns do not carry, including emergency, acute medicine and surgery, maternity, paediatrics, mental health, critical care, imaging and cancer services.

Around it sits a well-developed private sector, with private hospital, imaging and specialist services, including the only PET service anywhere in the South West, plus general practice, community health and Aboriginal community-controlled health services across the region. For the most complex work, Perth's tertiary hospitals are two hours north, and transfers, phone consults and telehealth links with them are an everyday part of how the region works.

~2 HRS NORTH

Perth as the tertiary partner

The most complex work goes to the capital's tertiary centres, with well-established transfer and advice pathways.

For imaging professionals in particular, Bunbury is an interesting place to work. Radiographers, sonographers and nuclear medicine technologists here are more likely to work across several modalities than in a large metropolitan department where the work is divided up, and cross-training tends to be genuinely available because a regional service values people who can cover more than one room.

Registration is national through Ahpra, but pay is set state by state. Public-sector pay follows the relevant Western Australian health industrial agreement for your profession; private-sector pay is negotiated with the employer and can be higher for hard-to-fill roles. Regional roles may also come with extra support, so it is always worth asking.

In a regional service you get to know your colleagues across every department

What to ask at interview

- ☐ How far does this service's referral catchment reach, and how much outreach or telehealth is involved?
- ☐ Which cases go to Perth in my specialty, and how is that handled day to day?
- ☐ How many colleagues work alongside me in my specialty specifically?
- ☐ What is the on-call pattern, and how often is it called upon?
- ☐ Which modalities or sub-specialties would I cover, and is cross-training supported?
- ☐ What CPD time and funding is offered, and does it include travel to Perth for courses?
- ☐ Is there relocation support or regional assistance, such as help with temporary housing?

Where to live in Bunbury

Nowhere in Greater Bunbury is a long commute, which frees you to choose on lifestyle. The real question is which water you would like to live beside: the ocean, the bay or the estuary.

Start with your workplace. The city's clinical sites are not all in one spot, and while almost everything is within about fifteen minutes, it is lovely to know whether you are choosing a five-minute or a twenty-minute drive before you sign a lease.

Then pick your side. The ocean side means surf, sea breezes and sunsets; the bay side means flat water, the waterfront and the city centre; across the estuary and inland you will find the newest family homes and the most space for your money.

WALKABLE · WATERFRONT

City centre & Marlston

~5-10 MIN · OCEAN BEACHES

South Bunbury & Withers

Established streets close to the ocean beaches, schools and shops. Housing varies street by street, so it rewards a wander before you commit.

~5-10 MIN · GREEN & QUIET

East Bunbury & College Grove

Leafy and settled, close to the university campus and schools. Popular with families who want space without a beachfront premium.

~15 MIN · COASTAL ESTATES

Dalyellup

A coastal community to the south with newer homes, parks, its own college and a young-family feel. A slightly longer drive, and most people love the trade.

~10-15 MIN · ESTUARY

Australind & Eaton

North-east across the estuary, with newer homes, larger blocks and calm water for kayaking and crabbing. Great value for families.

~15 MIN · SPACE & TREES

Gelorup & the semi-rural fringe

Bigger blocks among the tuart and peppermint trees, the closest thing to a small farm within easy reach of work. A car is essential.

Rent first, then buy

Almost everyone we help move here rents for six to twelve months before buying. Bunbury is a working port in a resources state, and the rental market can tighten when a big project is hiring, so securing somewhere for your first month before you fly, even short-term, makes the start much calmer.

Before you sign

- ☐ Confirm your work site, then map the drive at the time you would actually travel.
- ☐ Decide your water: ocean, bay, or estuary and inland.
- ☐ Check the school local-intake area for the exact address if you have children.
- ☐ Ask how the home stays warm and dry in winter and cool in summer.
- ☐ Visit the street at the time of day you would be coming home.

Getting around Bunbury

Bunbury is a fifteen-minute city in every direction. You will want a car for the South West, but you will hardly notice using it at home, and the drive to Perth is easier than most people expect.

Most trips around Greater Bunbury take ten to fifteen minutes, and parking is generally easy and often free, a small luxury that quickly becomes part of life. The local bus network, TransBunbury, runs town routes seven days a week and uses the SmartRider card; it is handy if you live on a route and work regular hours, though most clinicians on shifts drive.

The flat coastal and estuary paths are lovely for cycling and walking, especially along the bay and around the Leschenault Inlet. For weekends a car is part of the plan, because the wineries, forests, trailheads and beaches south of the city are the reason many people choose Bunbury in the first place.

Bunbury → Perth city centre	~2 hrs by car, ~2 hrs 30 by train
Bunbury → Perth Airport	~2 hrs

Perth, two hours north: close enough for a concert, a conference or a weekend in the capital

Your first month

- ✓ Sort a car early. The regional used-car market is smaller than a capital's, so give yourself time to choose.
- ✓ Check your licence conversion timeline with WA's Department of Transport soon after you arrive.
- ✓ If you live in Australind or Dalyellup, try the drive once at your real start time.
- ✓ Pick up a SmartRider if you plan to use the buses or the train to Perth.

What it costs to live here

Bunbury's big advantage is housing. Most everyday costs sit close to Perth's, but the roof over your head costs materially less, and that difference adds up beautifully over the years.

We don't print prices in our guides, because a figure that is right today can mislead within a year. What stays true is the shape of the budget. Groceries, fuel, insurance, power and phone plans cost much the same as in Perth: Australia is largely a national market, and Bunbury is big enough to have proper competition, so you won't pay a regional premium on the weekly shop.

Housing is where the city shines. Renting or buying here costs noticeably less than in Perth, and a fraction of Sydney or Melbourne, which changes what a single clinical salary can carry. Add free parking, short commutes and fewer before-school care hours spent covering a long drive, and the month goes further than people expect.

Where a month goes

Proportions for one person on a mid-range budget, not amounts. Rent is still the biggest line, but here it takes a smaller share than in Perth, Sydney or Melbourne.

Worth planning for

- ✓ Flights home. Most international trips start with the drive to Perth Airport, sometimes with a night either side, so build that into your travel plans.
- ✓ A cosy winter home. A well-heated, dry house makes the rainy months a pleasure.
- ✓ A car, and perhaps two. The South West is best explored by road; many couples manage with one car for the first year.
- ✓ The setting-up period: temporary accommodation, a bond of up to four weeks' rent plus rent in advance, and furnishing a home.

The best things here are free: a paddle on calm water costs nothing but an early start

Surf, swims and sunset walks make weekends go a long way

IN SHORT

- ✓ Think of Bunbury as Perth prices for everyday things, with a noticeably more affordable home.
- ✓ Short commutes and free parking quietly save both time and money.
- ✓ Plan ahead for flights home via Perth, and enjoy the beaches, bay and trails that cost nothing.

SOPHIE'S INSIGHTS

What I tell people about Bunbury

Bunbury is one of those places people underestimate on the map and fall for in person. When I talk to clinicians about it, I start with the work: a referral centre for a whole region, with a breadth of cases and a level of responsibility that you would wait years for in a big city department. For imaging professionals especially, the chance to work across modalities is a real gift for your career.

Then I talk about the life. Ten minutes to work, dolphins in the bay, a farmers' market that becomes your Saturday morning, and Margaret River as an ordinary weekend rather than a once-a-year holiday. Families tell me they finally have time for each other. If you want room to grow at work and room to breathe at home, with Perth close enough for everything else, I would love you to come and look.

New friendships often start around a shared table

Weekend brunch, the South West way

Food, shopping and the everyday

The real test of a place is how an ordinary Wednesday feels and whether Saturday morning has a rhythm. Bunbury does well on both, helped along by one much-loved market.

The Bunbury Farmers Market is the place locals mention first. It is a large, indoor produce market open seven days a week, packed with fruit and vegetables from South West growers, along with cheese, bread, meat, seafood and deli counters. The South West is the state's rain-fed food bowl, and having its produce on your doorstep makes cooking at home a pleasure rather than a chore.

Eating out is better than the size of the city suggests: good coffee, casual seafood, pubs and wine bars, and a cluster of restaurants along Victoria Street and the Marlston waterfront. The range of cuisines is smaller than a capital's, but Indian, Thai, Japanese, Vietnamese and Chinese restaurants are all here, and Perth is close for the occasional special trip.

What people do at the weekend

You are living at the top of the South West, the corner of Western Australia that everyone else drives hours to reach. Weekends here are outdoors, unhurried and close to home.

In the city itself, the weekend often starts on the water. The Dolphin Discovery Centre on Koombana Bay has an interaction zone where, on many mornings, wild dolphins swim in close to the beach, and boat cruises head out on the bay. Back Beach and Ocean Beach are for surf and long walks, Wyalup–Rocky Point has its striking dark basalt shoreline, and the sunset from the Marlston Hill lookout is a local ritual.

On calmer days families head to the Koombana Bay foreshore, with its sheltered swimming and big waterfront playground, or paddle and crab on the estuary. When it rains, there is the Bunbury Regional Art Gallery in a beautifully converted former convent, a full programme at the regional entertainment centre, the library and the city's indoor pools.

People drive four hours from Perth for the weekend you get by driving thirty minutes.

Around Bunbury

Bunbury isn't just near the South West; it is in it. Wine country, forest, the calm waters of Geographe Bay and the great surf coast of Margaret River are all day trips.

Head south along Geographe Bay and in under an hour you reach Busselton, where the timber jetty runs nearly two kilometres out over turquoise water, with a little train along its length and an underwater observatory at the end. Keep going and Dunsborough's sheltered beaches lead to Cape Naturaliste, with its lighthouse, coastal walks and some of the best whale watching in the state in spring.

Turn south from there and you are in the Margaret River region: world-renowned cellar doors and restaurants, limestone caves, towering karri forest, surf breaks that host international competition and the Cape to Cape Track running the length of the coast. It is close enough for a day trip and lovely enough for many long weekends.

Inland, the Ferguson Valley's green hills are thirty minutes away, and beyond them Collie and Wellington National Park offer mountain-bike trails, dams and quiet forest. Perth, with its tertiary hospitals, concerts, sport and international airport, is about two hours north.

Families and schools in Bunbury

Bunbury is a lovely place to grow up: beaches and parks on every side, sport for every age, short school runs and a community where families quickly get to know each other.

Kindergarten in WA is usually part-time and often based at the local primary school

Calm bay and estuary water makes paddling an easy family habit

Western Australian schooling starts with Kindergarten, a part-time, non-compulsory year for four-year-olds, usually at the local primary school. Pre-primary is the first compulsory year, then primary school runs from Year 1 to Year 6 and secondary from Year 7 to Year 12, ending with the WA Certificate of Education (WACE) and, for university entry, an ATAR. The school year runs from early February to mid-December across four terms.

There are three sectors. Public schools are run by the WA Department of Education and enrol by local-intake area, so your address decides your guaranteed local school. Catholic schools are run through Catholic Education Western Australia and the Bunbury diocese, and independent schools, many of them faith-based, set their own enrolment and fees. Well-established names in the city include Bunbury Senior High School, Bunbury Catholic College and Bunbury Cathedral Grammar School, with public senior high schools and colleges in Australind, Eaton and Dalyellup too.

School fees on a temporary visa

Western Australia charges dependants of many temporary visa holders a fee to attend public schools. For the common skilled work visas it is a yearly fee charged per family rather than per child. Check the current rules for your visa on the WA Department of Education's information for children who are dependants of visa holders before you plan your budget, and ask your employer whether they can help.

Choosing a school

- ☐ Check the local-intake area at the exact address using the Department of Education's Schools Online finder before you sign a lease.
- ☐ Look at school profiles on the My School website, then visit or ask for a video call.
- ☐ Ask about English as an Additional Language or Dialect (EAL/D) support if your children are new to English.
- ☐ Uniforms are bought from the school's uniform shop or the local uniform supplier the school names; many uniform shops also sell good second-hand items.

What children tend to love here

- ☒ Watching the dolphins at Koombana Bay and the Dolphin Discovery Centre.
- ☒ Surf lifesaving 'Nippers', swimming lessons and summer days on the Koombana Bay foreshore playground.
- ☒ Big Swamp Wildlife Park and the boardwalks through the estuary's mangroves.
- ☒ Gnomesville in the Ferguson Valley, and the jetty train at Busselton.
- ☒ Mountain-bike trails at Collie and in the local bush.
- ☒ Club sport for every age: Aussie rules, soccer, netball, cricket, basketball, hockey and more.

Early childhood

Before Kindergarten there are long day care centres, family day care and playgroups across Greater Bunbury. The Australian Government's Child Care Subsidy can reduce fees, but eligibility depends on your visa, so check with Services Australia early, and join waiting lists as soon as you know your suburb.

Rules, fees and services change. Treat these as starting points and confirm details with the organisation. Ethicare are recruitment specialists, not registered migration agents.

Six steps, and someone beside you for each one

Moving country is a sequence of decisions. We take them with you in order, so you are never solving step five before step two is done.

STEP 1

Discovery call

A relaxed conversation about your profession, your family and what you want from a move. No forms, no pressure.

STEP 2

Eligibility & registration

We map your route to Ahpra registration and help you gather the evidence the regulator will ask for.

STEP 3

Opportunities & interviews

Roles matched to where you want to live and how you like to work, with honest briefings before every interview.

STEP 4

Offer & decision support

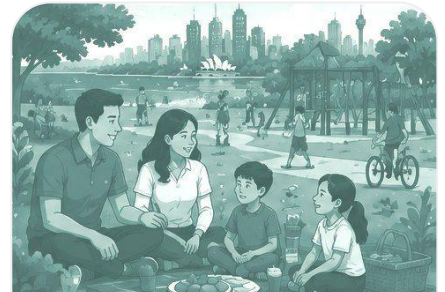

We help you read the offer properly: pay step, relocation support, roster and what the team is really like.

STEP 5

Visa & relocation guidance

Practical guidance on visas, shipping, pets, schools and the first weeks, so nothing arrives as a surprise.

STEP 6

Settling in

We stay in touch after you land, from your first week on the ward to your first winter.

— READY TO EXPLORE OPPORTUNITIES?

Picture yourself in Bunbury. Then let's make it real.

Tell us what you do and where you would like to live. We will come back with roles that fit, a clear view of the registration route, and time to answer every question.
