Perth

Boorloo

A relocation guide for healthcare professionals and their families. The work, the neighbourhoods, the money and the weekends in Perth.

Ocean sunsets. Room to live well.

Perth is Australia's sunniest capital: a relaxed river city on the Indian Ocean, with white-sand beaches, short commutes and a health system that has welcomed overseas clinicians for decades. It is the city people dismiss on the map and then fall for in person, and for many families it becomes the place where life finally has room to breathe.

Why clinicians choose Perth

Clinicians usually come to Perth for the lifestyle and the career, and stay because the two fit together so easily: a good job, a short drive, and the beach before dinner.

If you're looking for big-city buzz and a weekend in another capital every month, Perth may not be it. But if you're drawn to sunshine, uncrowded beaches, short commutes and a health service that knows how to welcome you, Perth could be a wonderful choice.

Start with daily life, because that is what wins people over. Perth's beaches are among the most beautiful of any Australian capital: white sand, clear water and a sunset over the ocean, and rarely crowded. It is the sunniest capital in the country, commutes are short, and a family home within twenty minutes or so of a tertiary campus is a realistic plan rather than a dream.

Professionally, Western Australia runs a genuine tertiary system with many newer facilities than the eastern states, and it has recruited internationally for decades. That means the process is well practised, orientation for overseas-trained staff is routine, and relocation support is common rather than exceptional.

A typical week might look like this: a twenty-minute drive or a train to work, a swim at Cottesloe or Trigg before a late start, coffee in Leederville or Mount Lawley, and Friday evening watching the sun drop into the Indian Ocean, which locals still stop for. Saturday is Fremantle's markets or the ferry to Rottnest with the bikes; Sunday is the Swan Valley among the vines, twenty-five minutes from the city.

WHAT YOU GAIN

A beach life, every day

Nineteen metropolitan beaches and warm, clear water for much of the year. A swim before work is an ordinary thing here.

Time back

Wide roads, fast rail lines and short commutes. Most clinicians are home in time for the evening, with daylight to spare.

A system used to welcoming you

Decades of international recruitment mean well-worn pathways, orientation and support for overseas-trained staff.

A regional migration advantage

The whole of Western Australia, Perth included, is currently classed as regional for skilled migration, which can open pathways the big eastern capitals do not. Ask us how this applies to you.

GOOD TO KNOW

A long way from everywhere

The east coast is around four to five hours by air, and long-haul travel is part of life. It suits you best if your life travels with you; plan your trips home into the year from the start.

A smaller market

A strong tertiary system, with fewer sites than Sydney or Melbourne. If your field is very specialised, talk to us early about where you would fit.

Long, warm summers

Months of dry sunshine, softened on the coast by the afternoon sea breeze. A home with good cooling and shade makes all the difference.

A relaxed pace

Perth is outdoorsy and easygoing rather than dense and urban. If you love that, you will feel at home quickly.

An honest word before you decide

Perth is one of the most sought-after destinations in Australia, and competition for healthcare roles here is very high. Securing a role, and particularly a sponsored role, is considerably more challenging in Perth than in regional Australia. Perth's regional status for migration can widen your visa options, but it does not change how many people are applying for each role. We are not saying it's impossible, but we want to be honest with you: it can take longer, and it helps to be flexible. Many clinicians start in a regional city, where demand and sponsorship are often stronger, and move to Perth later with Australian experience behind them.

Same clock as Asia

Perth runs on Western Standard Time (UTC+8) with no daylight saving: two hours behind Sydney in winter and three in summer, and the same clock as Singapore and Hong Kong. Direct flights to South-East Asia take around five hours, and there are direct services to Europe, so for families in Asia, Africa or the UK the flight map from Perth is often better than you might expect.

A sunny city between the ocean and the hills

Perth is wonderfully simple to read: a long, narrow city on a coastal plain, with the Indian Ocean on one side, the Swan River through the middle and the Darling Scarp rising behind.

Around 2.3 million people live in Greater Perth, Australia's fourth-largest city and the capital of its largest state. The Swan River widens through the middle of the city; the central business district sits on its northern bank, with Kings Park on the escarpment above, and South Perth looks back across the water. Elizabeth Quay and the foreshore have reconnected the centre to the river, and the main tertiary campuses sit close in, on both sides of it.

North and south of the river mouth, the beach suburbs run for around a hundred kilometres: Cottesloe, City Beach, Scarborough and Trigg in the middle, Hillarys and Sorrento further north, and Fremantle at the river mouth with its port, heritage buildings and an identity all of its own. Inland, the plain runs flat for about twenty kilometres before rising into the Perth Hills at Kalamunda and Mundaring, cooler, greener and semi-rural, with the Swan Valley's vineyards to the north-east.

The city grew late and fast, so much of the housing, transport and infrastructure is newer than in the eastern capitals. It is also strongly international: around a third of residents were born overseas, with large British, Irish and South African communities, and well-established Indian, Malaysian, Singaporean, Filipino and Vietnamese families.

Summer

DEC – FEB

Long, dry and sunny, often in the low thirties and sometimes hotter. The afternoon sea breeze, the 'Fremantle Doctor', cools the coast most days. Beach season, and bushfire season, so follow the official warnings.

Autumn

MAR – MAY

Many locals' favourite months: warm sea, settled weather and golden evenings. Perfect for Rottnest, the river and weekends down south.

Winter

JUN – AUG

Short, mild and green, with most of the year's rain. Days are usually in the high teens; a jacket rather than a coat, and waterfalls running in the hills.

Spring

SEP – NOV

Warming up, and wildflower season: Western Australia's bush blooms with thousands of species, many found nowhere else on earth.

A note on Country

Perth stands on Whadjuk Noongar boodja, part of Noongar Country, which covers the whole south-west of the state. Boorloo is the Noongar name for the Perth area, and Derbarl Yerrigan for the Swan River. The Noongar calendar has six seasons (Birak, Bunuru, Djeran, Makuru, Djilba and Kambarang), and you will see it used in schools, parks and health services. Acknowledgement of Country opens many meetings, and your cultural induction is a lovely place to start learning.

Healthcare and work in Perth

Perth offers a genuine tertiary system in a city small enough to get to know, with many newer facilities and a long history of welcoming overseas-trained clinicians.

Western Australia runs its public system through a small number of health services, each an employer in its own right. Several cover metropolitan Perth, broadly the north, the south and the east, and each anchors a tertiary teaching campus with secondary and community sites around it. Alongside them sit a statewide children's service, a single country service covering the vast regional and remote state, and a substantial private sector in hospitals, imaging and pathology.

Aboriginal community-controlled health organisations play an important role in both the city and the regions, and cultural safety training is part of working here. Registration is national through Ahpra, so the same registration lets you work anywhere in Australia.

Perth's health services have recruited internationally for decades, so you will often work alongside other overseas-trained colleagues

for skilled migration

The whole state, Perth included

What that means for your career is a system you can know personally. You will meet the people who lead your specialty in the state within a year or so, and opportunities often come through relationships faster than in a bigger city. If your field is very specialised, there may be only a handful of possible employers, so it is worth talking to us early about where you would fit best.

Beyond the city, the regional and remote work is unlike anything on the east coast: the Pilbara, the Kimberley, the Goldfields and the South West, often with broad scope and attractive incentives. Some Perth roles include rotations to country sites, which many clinicians come to love.

Giving yourself the best chance in Perth

- ✓ Be open to more than one campus, service or shift pattern. The wider your search, the better your chances.
- ✓ Keep a regional option alongside Perth. Regional cities often have stronger demand and are more able to sponsor, and Australian experience makes a later move to Perth much easier.
- ✓ Get your registration well under way early. Employers here often favour candidates who can start sooner.
- ✓ Talk to us early, so we can give you a realistic picture for your profession and specialty.

What to ask at interview

- ☐ Pay follows WA awards and enterprise agreements. We quote no figures here and will walk you through the current agreement for your profession.
- ☐ Salary packaging: public-health roles can package part of your pay before tax, so ask how much and how to start it from day one.
- ☐ Which health service and which campus, and whether you may be rostered across sites.
- ☐ The roster: shift patterns, penalties, on-call frequency and how gaps are covered.
- ☐ Relocation support, which is common here and well worth asking about.
- ☐ CPD: funded time and budget, and whether travel to east-coast conferences is covered.
- ☐ Supervision and support in your first year, especially if you trained overseas.
- ☐ Any rural or regional rotations, and the allowances that come with them.

Two things to do early

Start your Ahpra registration as soon as Perth is on your shortlist, because paperwork is usually what sets your start date. And ask about the regional migration position explicitly: it is a real advantage, and worth understanding before you compare offers.

Where to live in Perth

Perth's housing choice comes down to a lovely question: how close to the ocean would you like to be? Coast, river, character suburbs or the hills, each has its own feel, and most are a short drive from work.

~15–20 MIN · BEACHES

Cottesloe, Swanbourne & City Beach

The classic western-suburbs coast: white sand at the end of the street, the sea breeze first and a sundowner on the sand. Premium, and wonderful.

~20–25 MIN · SURF & FAMILY

Scarborough, Trigg & Sorrento

The same beautiful coast, more family-shaped and better value as you head north, with surf clubs, newer homes and the Scarborough foreshore.

~10–15 MIN · RIVER & SCHOOLS

Nedlands, Claremont & Subiaco

Leafy, established suburbs near the river and the central campuses, with well-regarded schools and character homes.

~10–20 MIN · RIVER VIEWS

South Perth, Como & Applecross

Riverside living south of the water: foreshore paths, established trees, the ferry into town and easy access to the southern campuses.

~10 MIN · CAFÉS & CHARACTER

Mount Lawley, Leederville & North Perth

1920s bungalows, café strips and small bars: the closest Perth comes to inner-city living, and very walkable.

~25 MIN · PORT CITY

Fremantle & around

South Fremantle, Beaconsfield and White Gum Valley: limestone heritage, markets, arts and a strong community, close to the southern campuses.

30–40 MIN · SPACE & TREES

Kalamunda & the Perth Hills

Semi-rural life with cooler air, big gardens and bushwalks. Lovely for families who want space; plan ahead for the bushfire season.

TRAIN-SERVED · BEST VALUE

The rail corridors, north & south

Newer suburbs along the northern and southern rail lines, from Joondalup to Baldivis, with the newest and most affordable family homes.

Many clinicians rent for six months to a year while they learn the city, then choose a suburb for good. A family house within about twenty minutes of a tertiary campus is a realistic plan in Perth, which is true of very few Australian cities. Rents move with the resources economy, so ask locals and your new colleagues what the market has been doing lately.

Before you sign a lease

- ☐ How far inland is it, and does the afternoon sea breeze reach? It can be worth several degrees on a summer afternoon.
- ☐ What is the commute to your campus, and is there a train line nearby?
- ☐ Cooling: what kind of air conditioning is there, and how does the home handle a run of hot days?
- ☐ In the hills or on the bushland fringe: what is the bushfire rating, and what is the plan?
- ☐ Is it in the local-intake area for the school you want? Public school places are linked to your address.

Getting around Perth

Perth is one of the easiest Australian capitals to get around: fast rail lines, wide roads, short commutes, and flat, sunny streets made for cycling.

Public transport is run by Transperth, and one tap-on card, SmartRider, covers trains, buses and ferries (contactless bank cards also work). Fast rail lines run north, south and east along the freeways to the growth suburbs, plus the Fremantle line and the Airport line. Free CAT buses loop through the city centre, Fremantle and Joondalup, and the ferry crosses the river to South Perth.

Outside the train corridors, Perth is a car city, but an easy one: wide roads, light traffic by east-coast standards and parking at a fraction of Sydney's cost. Australians drive on the left. The flat terrain and sunshine also make Perth one of Australia's best cycling cities, with separated paths along the river, the coast and the rail lines.

Driving licences

Licence conversion is handled by the WA Department of Transport. Licences from many countries can be converted without a driving test, so check their 'moving to WA' guidance soon after you arrive, as there is a time limit for driving on an overseas licence once you live here. Outside the city, distances are large: plan fuel stops and take care with wildlife around dawn and dusk.

Shared paths under the gums: Perth's flat terrain makes cycling a real option for the commute

What it costs to live here

Perth sits comfortably below Sydney and Melbourne on housing, close to Brisbane, and its best pleasures, the beaches, the parks and the sunsets, cost nothing at all.

We don't print prices in our guides, because a figure that was right when it was written can mislead a year later. What stays true is the shape of a month and which lines are worth planning for. For today's numbers, use the comparison links in the local directory and compare Perth with the city you are leaving.

The structural point is a happy one: a family home within about twenty minutes of a tertiary campus is a realistic plan here. Shorter commutes mean less fuel and more of your day, there are effectively no toll roads in the state, and public-health roles can salary-package part of your pay before tax.

Where a month goes

Proportions for one person on a mid-range budget, not amounts. Rent is the biggest line, and in Perth it takes a noticeably smaller share than in Sydney or Melbourne.

Worth planning for

- ✓ Trips home. Perth is a long way from family overseas and on the east coast, so most people build two or three trips a year into their budget from the start.
- ✓ Some imported groceries cost a little more, while local produce, seafood and fruit are excellent and well priced.
- ✓ Summer cooling. A shaded home that gets the sea breeze does a lot of the work for free; further inland, air conditioning works harder.
- ✓ The setting-up period: temporary accommodation, a bond of up to four weeks' rent plus rent in advance, and a car.

The best of Perth is free: nineteen metropolitan beaches, surf lessons and long summer evenings

Beach days, river paths and park barbecues cost nothing, which is why weekends here go so far

IN SHORT

- ✓ Housing is clearly more affordable than in Sydney or Melbourne, and short commutes give you time as well as money back.
- ✓ Build flights home into your yearly plan; it is the one line that is uniquely Perth.
- ✓ Choose a home with shade, good cooling and the sea breeze if you can, and enjoy everything that is free.

SOPHIE'S INSIGHTS

What I tell people about Perth

Perth is the city candidates often dismiss on the map and then fall in love with in person. The beaches, the sunshine and the space for family life are some of the best in Australia, and the health service is genuinely good at welcoming international staff, because it has been doing it for decades.

The question I always ask is about family. If you need to reach people at home quickly, we will plan your year around trips back together, and the direct flights to Asia and Europe help more than people expect. If your life travels with you, Perth is one of the most beautiful places in Australia to build it, and I love watching families settle here.

Our local directory lists some to start with.

Life here is lived outdoors and early: a swim before work, coffee after, free gas barbecues in the foreshore parks and dinner outside for most of the year. The calendar runs on the Perth Festival and Fringe World in summer, Sculpture by the Sea at Cottesloe, and Australian rules football, which is close to a civic religion. Clubs, places of worship and community associations sit alongside the shops, and they help a new city feel like home quickly, especially if you are arriving from the UK, South Africa, India or the Philippines.

What people do at the weekend

Perth's weekends are wonderfully good and wonderfully close: an island half an hour by ferry, nineteen beaches inside the city, and wine country twenty-five minutes away.

Weekends here revolve around the water. Cottesloe is for the sunset crowd, Scarborough for the surf and the beach pool, Trigg for the waves, Mettams Pool for snorkelling over the reef and City Beach for families. The Swan River is the city's other playground: kayaking, sailing, paddleboarding and the foreshore paths, with Kings Park above it all for picnics, playgrounds and the best view in town.

Rottne Island, Wadjemup, is so close that Perth families treat it as part of the city: no cars, just bikes, more than sixty beaches and the famously cheerful quokkas. Inland, the Perth Hills offer bushwalks, winter waterfalls and villages that stay cooler in summer.

Around Perth

Perth is famous for its isolation, yet its weekends reach a long way: south to the wineries and forests of the South West, north to desert spires and reef, and east into the hills.

Three hours south is the region that makes Western Australians so proud of their state: Margaret River, with world-class wine, surf breaks along a limestone coast, tall karri forest, caves and a food culture to match. On the way, Busselton's jetty runs nearly two kilometres out over turquoise water, and Bunbury, the main city of the South West, sits on a beautiful bay where dolphins visit. Closer still, Mandurah, under an hour south by train or car, is a waterside city of canals, estuaries and pelicans.

North of the city, the Coral Coast begins. The Pinnacles, thousands of limestone spires in yellow sand, are about two hours away; beyond lie Kalbarri, Hutt Lagoon's pink waters and, for a longer holiday, Ningaloo Reef, where you can swim from the beach onto coral. And when you want snow, the ski fields are a flight east: around four hours to Melbourne, then a drive into the Victorian Alps, which many families happily make an annual winter adventure.

Families and schools in Perth

Perth is a wonderful place to grow up: beaches, parks and sport everywhere, short commutes that leave time for family, and a school system used to welcoming children from overseas.

After the bell: school days here end early enough for the beach

A shaded suburban playground in Bunbury, south of Perth: parks like this are everywhere in WA

Western Australian schooling starts with Kindergarten, a part-time, non-compulsory year for four-year-olds, often at the local primary school. Pre-primary, the year children turn five to six, is the first compulsory year. Primary school runs from Year 1 to Year 6 and secondary school from Year 7 to Year 12, ending with the WA Certificate of Education (WACE) and, for university entry, an ATAR.

There are three sectors. Public schools are run by the WA Department of Education; Catholic schools by Catholic Education Western Australia; and independent schools, many of them faith-based, are represented by the Association of Independent Schools of WA. Public schools enrol by local-intake area, so your home address decides your guaranteed local school. Catholic and independent schools set their own enrolment and fees.

WA also offers specialist and selective programmes, including Perth Modern School, the state's fully academically selective public secondary school, and gifted and talented programmes in a number of public high schools.

School fees on a temporary visa

Western Australia charges dependants of many temporary visa holders a fee to attend public schools. For the common skilled work visas this is a yearly fee charged per family rather than per child, and it is administered on behalf of the WA Department of Education by TAFE International WA. Check the current rules for your visa on the WA Department of Education's page on children who are dependants of visa holders before you plan your budget, and ask your employer whether they help with it.

Choosing a school

- ☐ Check the local-intake area at the exact address before you sign a lease, using the Department of Education's Schools Online finder.
- ☐ Look at a school's results and profile on the My School website, and visit or ask for a video call.
- ☐ Ask about English as an Additional Language or Dialect (EAL/D) support for children new to Australia.
- ☐ Uniforms are usually bought from the school's own uniform shop, often run by the parents' association, which also sells good second-hand items.
- ☐ The school year runs from early February to mid-December in four terms.

What children tend to love here

- ☒ Beach days, surf-lifesaving 'Nippers' and swimming lessons from an early age.
- ☒ The Perth Zoo across the river in South Perth, and the Aquarium of Western Australia at Hillarys.
- ☒ Riding bikes on the river and coastal paths.
- ☒ Kings Park's playgrounds, treetop walkway and bushland trails.
- ☒ Scitech, the city's hands-on science centre.
- ☒ Club sport for every age: Aussie rules, soccer, netball, cricket, basketball and more.

Early childhood

Before Kindergarten there are long day care centres, family day care and playgroups across the city. The Australian Government's Child Care Subsidy can reduce fees, but eligibility depends on your visa, so check with Services Australia before you plan your budget.

Perth gives you the sunset, the sea breeze and the time to enjoy them.

Your Perth address book

Perth is one of Australia's most international cities, with around a third of residents born overseas. Its Malayali community is long established, with Kairali dating back to 1995 and the Malayali Association of Perth running Onam and Vishu celebrations each year, and there are Syro-Malabar, Syro-Malankara and Indian Orthodox congregations alongside active Nigerian, Filipino and Irish communities, temples, gurdwaras and mosques across the city.
