A mountain over the wards. A harbour at the end of the street.

Hobart is Australia's most deliberate capital: a working harbour city folded around the Derwent, with kunanyi / Mount Wellington standing directly above it. It carries the depth of Tasmania's single statewide health service, a university medical school and some of the shortest commutes in the country. People rarely drift here; they choose it, and the clinicians who do are among the happiest we place anywhere.

Why clinicians choose Hobart

Hobart's photographs undersell the practical case: a walkable harbour city, serious medicine, and wilderness twenty minutes from the ward. Here is what it gives a working clinician, and who it suits best.

If you are looking for big-city buzz and a metropolis-sized job market, Hobart may not be it. But if you are drawn to a city you can hold in your head, a health system that knows your name and a mountain at the end of your street, it could be a wonderful choice.

Start with the working life. Tasmania runs its public health care as one statewide service, and Hobart carries its depth: the state's principal referral hospital, the island's widest range of specialist services and the university's medical school alongside it. Careers here run broad rather than narrow. You see more, carry more, and are known by name in a way that larger systems rarely manage. Smaller systems also tend to look after the people they recruit, with relocation help, genuine welcomes and rosters negotiated with a human.

Then the life around the work. Housing costs less than in the big mainland capitals, commutes are short from almost every suburb, and the city's real currency is proximity: the mountain fifteen minutes from the wards, the harbour at the end of the street, and World Heritage wilderness an hour or two away. The whole of Tasmania, Hobart included, is classed as regional for skilled migration, which can open extra visa pathways and points.

A week here can plausibly hold all of this: a shift that starts without traffic; an after-work walk on kunanyi's foothill tracks or a swim at Kingston Beach in the long summer light; Salamanca Market on Saturday morning, then a cellar-door lunch in the Coal River Valley; and Sunday under the sea cliffs of the Tasman Peninsula, home by dark. In winter the same week simply changes shape: snow on the mountain over breakfast, a log fire in a pub that has kept one burning for a century, and June given over to the fires and feasts of Dark Mofo. People here don't wait out the seasons; they use them.

WHAT YOU GAIN

Breadth and recognition

A wide case mix, responsibility earlier, and colleagues who know you within weeks.

Time back

Short commutes from almost everywhere, so evenings are yours.

Nature on the doorstep

A mountain, a harbour and some of the world's great wilderness, all within easy reach.

Four real seasons

Autumn colour, crisp blue winter days and long summer evenings: home for anyone who misses proper seasons.

GOOD TO KNOW

A smaller market

One principal referral centre; some narrow sub-specialty work is referred to Melbourne. Worth talking through if you have a very specific career ladder in mind.

Winter is part of the deal

Cool, short days from June to August. Choose a warm, well-heated home and you'll find locals embrace the season with gusto.

Island logistics

Family visits and big shopping trips mean a flight or the ferry; Melbourne is about 75 minutes away by air.

A quick rental market

Good homes go fast, so arrive with your paperwork ready.

Weighing up your options?

If you need scale, such as sub-specialty depth or two big-system careers, Sydney or Melbourne carry more sites. If the dream is warmth rather than wilderness, Brisbane may suit you better. If you're drawn to seasons, nature and a close-knit system, Hobart could be a great choice. We are always happy to talk any of them through.

The mountain, the harbour and four real seasons

Hobart reads simply once you have the shape of it: a harbour city folded around the Derwent estuary, a mountain standing directly over it, and two shores linked by one bridge.

kunanyi / Mount Wellington rises straight out of the city to 1,271 metres. Its summit road is about a fifteen-minute drive from the city centre, and locals read the day's weather from the mountain. Below it, Sullivans Cove and the working docks around Constitution Dock and Salamanca Place still land fish and fill restaurants, a rare thing among Australian capitals. Founded in 1804, Hobart is Australia's second-oldest capital after Sydney.

The Tasman Bridge is the hinge of the city. The western shore holds the city centre, the university and most of the inner suburbs; the eastern shore (Bellerive, Lindisfarne, Rosny) is about ten minutes over the bridge, with water views and morning sun. South of the centre, Kingston and Blackmans Bay are the family-beach suburbs, and beyond them the Huon Valley opens into orchards and river towns. North up the Derwent, New Town and Glenorchy offer gentler prices.

The summit of kunanyi / Mount Wellington, about fifteen minutes' drive from the city

The climate is cool temperate, with four distinct seasons: closer to England, Ireland or New Zealand's South Island than to mainland Australia. The weather can change quickly in any month, so layers and a good jacket are year-round companions, and the UV is strong even when the air is cool.

Summer

DEC – FEB

Mild and long-lit, with days around 17–23°C and evenings that stay cool. Light until late, and the city's big, bright festival fortnight at New Year.

Autumn

MAR – MAY

Still, clear and golden, around 12–18°C. Deciduous trees turn red and gold: many locals' favourite season.

Winter

JUN – AUG

Cool and crisp, around 4–12°C, often with blue skies and snow dusting the summit. Log fires, Dark Mofo and cosy evenings.

Spring

SEP – NOV

Fresh, breezy and green, around 11–17°C, with blossom in the gardens and the days lengthening fast.

Warm homes: what to look for

Much of Hobart's housing is older and full of character. Ask how a home is heated before you sign: a good heat pump and decent curtains transform winter. And if you'll drive the mountain road on cold mornings, locals will happily share their black-ice habits.

A note on Country

Hobart stands on the Country of the muwinina people, and its palawa kani name is nipaluna. Today's Tasmanian Aboriginal community, the palawa/pakana, carries one of the oldest living cultures on earth.

Acknowledgement of Country opens meetings, and health services work in partnership with Aboriginal community-controlled organisations.

Dual names are official and warmly used: nipaluna (Hobart), kunanyi (Mount Wellington) and kanamaluka (the Tamar). Learning them early is noticed and appreciated.

Healthcare and work in Hobart

Registration is national and hiring across Tasmania is statewide. Hobart's distinguishing feature is depth: it carries the principal referral hospital for the whole island and the widest range of roles in the state.

Tasmania runs public health care as one statewide service rather than splitting the island into separate networks. Hobart's principal hospital holds the state's specialist and tertiary services, including cardiothoracic surgery, neurosurgery and burns, and the university's medical school shares the city with it, alongside nursing and allied health teaching. Private and not-for-profit hospitals sit alongside the public system, and Aboriginal community-controlled health organisations work in partnership across it.

Because it is one employer across the island, a move between Hobart, the north and the north-west is an internal move rather than a new job. Seniority and relationships carry with you, and many clinicians build a career across two of the three regions.

Breadth is the hallmark of a Hobart career: a varied case mix and responsibility early

A university on the doorstep

Joint clinical and academic roles are more available than the city's size suggests.

What a smaller system means for a career is, above all, breadth. Hobart clinicians see a wider case mix and carry more responsibility earlier than many big-city colleagues; generalist skills are prized, and the referral role for the whole island keeps the caseload varied. Some narrow sub-specialty work is referred to Melbourne, so if you have a very specific career ladder in mind, it is worth talking it through with us. In a system this size you are known quickly, and services tend to look after the people they go to the trouble of recruiting from overseas.

Continuity of care is easier to see in a smaller, close-knit system

Imaging and allied health roles carry real breadth in Hobart

What to ask at interview

- ☐ Salary packaging: public health roles can package part of your pay before tax. Ask how much, and how to start it from day one.
- ☐ The roster: shift patterns, penalty rates, on-call frequency, and how gaps are covered in a smaller team.
- ☐ Scope and supervision: what you'll carry, and the support around it, especially in your first year.
- ☐ CPD: funded time and money, and whether mainland conference travel is covered.
- ☐ Public, private or both: what rights of private practice exist in your profession.
- ☐ Where you'll work: which site, and parking at your shift times.
- ☐ Professional indemnity: what the employer covers and what you hold yourself.

Two things to do early

Start your Ahpra registration as soon as Hobart is on your shortlist: in a smaller system, start dates move at the speed of paperwork. And check ambulance cover on arrival: Tasmanian residents generally don't pay for ambulances, but many temporary visa holders aren't covered by that waiver, so make sure your health insurance includes it.

Where to live in Hobart

On an island where nothing is far from anything, this choice is less about commute and more about which Hobart you want: the harbour village, the eastern shore, the beach south or the valley.

Renting works the same way across Australia: you apply through an agent, pay a bond of about four weeks' rent, which is lodged with the state's Rental Deposit Authority, and sign a lease. One Hobart habit worth copying: arrive with references, proof of income and your offer letter as clean PDFs, because good homes go to complete applications quickly. Most people rent for the first months and re-choose their suburb once they know the city.

Before you sign a lease

- ☐ How is it heated? A heat pump makes winter cosy; this is the question in Hobart.
- ☐ Is it inside the school intake area you need? Boundaries run street by street.
- ☐ What's the commute at your shift times, including the bridge if you're on the eastern shore?
- ☐ Would a short-term rental first be wiser while you get to know the suburbs?

Getting around Hobart

Hobart is a driving city with some of the shortest commutes in the country. Buses cover the main corridors, one bridge links the two shores, and a small car ferry takes you to Bruny Island.

Car-free life is realistic in the inner villages and along the bus corridors if you choose your street carefully. Everywhere else, plan on a car from day one. Australians drive on the left, and Hobart is a gentle place to learn: light traffic, short distances, and scenery that turns errands into small outings. You can usually drive on a valid overseas licence for a period, then convert to a Tasmanian licence once you're resident.

Two local skills: slow down and brake gently on frosty winter mornings, especially on the mountain road, and take extra care at dawn and dusk on the edges of town, when wildlife is on the move.

Central Hobart: compact, historic and easy to get around

Bringing your car across

The Spirit of Tasmania car ferry sails across Bass Strait between Geelong, near Melbourne, and Devonport on Tasmania's north-west coast. It carries your car, your belongings and the family dog, and for many households it is the move itself. Devonport is about three hours' drive from Hobart, so build that into arrival day and book early in summer.

What it costs to live here

Hobart costs less than the big mainland capitals, and everyday life is gentle on the wallet. Housing is where the gap shows most, and it is housing that decides whether a salary feels generous.

We don't print prices in these guides, because a figure that was true when a page was written can mislead a year later. What stays true is the shape of a month and the lines worth planning for. Like-for-like housing runs well below Sydney and Melbourne, short commutes save time and fuel, and some of the best things to do here, from the mountain to the beaches, are free.

Two lines are worth planning for: heating, because winter is cool and much of the housing is older, and a car, because most households need one. On the income side, public health roles can salary-package part of your pay before tax, so ask payroll about it on day one.

Where a month goes

Proportions for one person on a mid-range budget, not amounts. Rent is the biggest line, and a smaller share than in the big mainland capitals.

Worth planning for

- ✓ Winter heating. A home with a good heat pump can make a real difference to the season's bills, so make heating a search criterion.
- ✓ Island living. Goods cross Bass Strait, so some groceries, fuel and trades run a little dearer, and family visits mean a flight or the ferry.
- ✓ A reliable car, with registration and insurance, belongs in your arrival budget.
- ✓ The bridge to your first pay: temporary accommodation, a rental bond of about four weeks' rent, the car and some proper winter kit.

Riverside parks and gardens: some of Hobart's best things cost nothing

Sandstone squares and cafés in Hobart's historic waterfront precinct

IN SHORT

- ✓ On a clinical salary, Hobart is comfortable, and housing costs noticeably less than in Sydney or Melbourne.
- ✓ Choose a warm home with good heating; it pays you back every winter.
- ✓ Budget for a car early, and use the live calculators in the directory to compare Hobart with home.

SOPHIE'S INSIGHTS

What I tell people about Hobart

What I love about Hobart is how deliberately people make time for life: a walk up kunanyi after work, the market on a Saturday morning, a weekend somewhere wild. And in a smaller, close-knit system, you're valued and looked after in a way that bigger cities can find hard to match.

My advice is to choose Hobart on purpose. The clinicians who come for the life it really offers, crisp winters and all, become some of the happiest people I've ever placed. If you love seasons, nature and being part of a community, I'd love to help you take a closer look.

Buying at the farm gate is a local habit: cherries in January, apples in autumn, oysters all year. The scallop pie, curried scallops in pastry, is the island's bakery signature and worth trying at least once, and Tasmanian single malts win international awards.

Hobart has a friendly spread of Asian, Indian and continental grocers and some halal butchers, and the big supermarkets carry a growing world-food range. For harder-to-find ingredients, many families combine local shops with an online order. The Migrant Resource Centre Tasmania is a lovely first stop for finding your community's grocers, cooks and gatherings.

Flavours of home: Diwali, Onam and community feasts are part of Hobart's calendar

The rhythm of the year

- ✓ All year: MONA itself, which changed how the rest of Australia sees Hobart.
- ✓ Winter: MONA's midwinter festival, Dark Mofo, brings fire, art and feasting to June. Hobart doesn't endure the dark; it throws it a party.
- ✓ Community celebrations such as Diwali, Onam and Harmony Week bring the city's growing communities together.

Good to know

Single-use plastic bags aren't used in shops here, so locals keep reusable bags and a cooler bag in the car for the market run. For a big shopping trip or a touring concert, Melbourne is a short flight away.

What people do at the weekend

Almost everything worth a weekend sits within an hour or two of the wards, and in Hobart the seasons shape the calendar.

A typical Hobart weekend

- ✓ Saturday morning at Salamanca Market, coffee in hand, then a walk along the waterfront.
- ✓ MONA by ferry, then a long lunch back at the wharf.
- ✓ A cellar-door lunch in the Coal River Valley, about half an hour out.
- ✓ A drive to kunanyi's summit, then down the Organ Pipes or one of the foothill tracks.
- ✓ Kingston Beach at golden hour, or a picnic in the riverside parks.

Tasmania is roughly the size of Ireland, and almost nothing on the island is more than a few hours away. From Hobart, beaches, wilderness, wine country and the second city are all easy trips.

Close to home, Bruny Island is a short drive and a car ferry from Kettering: oysters, cheese, sea cliffs and the famous Neck lookout. The Tasman Peninsula is about ninety minutes away, with the Three Capes walk along some of the highest sea cliffs in Australia and Port Arthur, a moving and important historic site. The Huon Valley is orchard and river country, and Mount Field National Park, an hour inland, has waterfalls, tall forests and a small club ski field.

Further afield, the east coast is a long weekend of pink granite and white sand at Freycinet and Wineglass Bay. Launceston, the island's elegant second city, is about two and a half hours north, with the Cataract Gorge in the middle of town and the Tamar Valley vineyards around it, and Cradle Mountain sits in the heart of the World Heritage wilderness.

Tasmanian schooling runs in stages. Children start Kindergarten, a free government programme of part-time sessions, in the year before Prep, then move to primary school from Prep to Year 6 and high school from Year 7 to Year 10. Years 11 and 12 are usually completed at a senior secondary college or an extended high school, a distinctive Tasmanian model that gives older students a more adult, college-style setting. Young people stay in education or training until they turn 18 or complete Year 12 or an equivalent.

Most children attend government schools, which take enrolments by intake area, so check the area for an exact address before you sign a lease. Catholic schools (run through Catholic Education Tasmania) and independent schools are well established, including long-standing Hobart schools such as The Hutchins School, Fahan School, St Michael's Collegiate and The Friends' School.

School fees for temporary visa holders

Tasmania enrolls the children of temporary visa holders in government schools through its Temporary Resident Program. Dependents of subclass 482 visa holders pay no tuition, just the ordinary school levies that every family pays; some other visa subclasses pay a portion of the programme fee. Check your visa subclass on the Department for Education, Children and Young People's Temporary Resident Program page before you budget.

Choosing a school

- ☐ Check the intake area for the exact address on the Department for Education, Children and Young People's Find your local school page.
- ☐ Ask about the school levy and how uniforms are bought: most schools have their own uniform shop or nominated supplier, and many run second-hand sales.
- ☐ Visit, or ask for a call with the principal; schools are used to welcoming families from overseas.
- ☐ For Years 11 and 12, look at the senior secondary colleges and what courses they offer.

What children tend to love here

- ✓ Beaches at Kingston, Blackmans Bay and Sandy Bay, with surf lifesaving Nippers in summer.
- ✓ Salamanca Market, the waterfront and the ferries up the Derwent.
- ✓ Bush walks, waterfalls and wildlife spotting at weekends.
- ✓ Snow on kunanyi in winter, often just a short drive from home.
- ✓ Club sport for every age: Aussie Rules, cricket, netball, football, sailing and more.

Six steps, and someone beside you for each one

Moving country is a sequence of decisions. We take them with you in order, so you are never solving step five before step two is done.

STEP 1

Discovery call

A relaxed conversation about your profession, your family and what you want from a move. No forms, no pressure.

STEP 2

Eligibility & registration

We map your route to Ahpra registration and help you gather the evidence the regulator will ask for.

STEP 3

Opportunities & interviews

Roles matched to where you want to live and how you like to work, with honest briefings before every interview.

STEP 4

Offer & decision support

We help you read the offer properly: pay step, relocation support, roster and what the team is really like.

STEP 5

Visa & relocation guidance

Practical guidance on visas, shipping, pets, schools and the first weeks, so nothing arrives as a surprise.

STEP 6

Settling in

We stay in touch after you land, from your first week on the ward to your first winter.

— READY TO EXPLORE OPPORTUNITIES?

Picture yourself in Hobart. Then let's make it real.

Tell us what you do and where you would like to live. We will come back with roles that fit, a clear view of the registration route, and time to answer every question.
